WEDDING FOLLOWS MOTHER'S DENIAL SON WAS ENGAGED

Young Pair Accompanied to Little South Carolina Town by Miss Betty Collins, Nassau, and Addison Smith, Atlanta.

WRITES PERFORMED BY PROBATE JUDGE

Atlanta Girl's Engagement to Member of Philadelphia Family Announced Here Tuesday.

Anthony J. Drexel III, of the wealthy Philadelphia family, was married Saturday night in Walhalla, S. C., to Miss Helen Avis Howard, daughter of the late Mr. Howard, of the same family, in an engagement which followed by a few hours a denial by Mrs. Anthony Drexel Jr., at Nassau, B. W. I., that her son was engaged to the Atlanta girl.

The two, accompanied by Miss Betty Collins, of Nassau, and Addison Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward D. Smith, prominent Atlantans, were in the small South Carolina town late in the afternoon and were married simply in the courthouse by probate Judge W. Frank Gillespie, of same county, who said a short marriage ceremony. The wedding supper was eaten in South Carolina before the young couple and their two friends returned to Atlanta.

The marriage culminated a romance of short duration which began when Miss Howard, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Clinton Chappell Howard, attended a party in Nassau, B. W. I., on Saturday night. She was surprised to find among her guests the young couple who had been engaged to be married. Drexel's mother, Mrs. Anthony Drexel, who was in Nassau, B. W. I., at the time, said she had no knowledge of the engagement. She said she had been notified of her son's engagement to the Atlanta girl, but she had not known of it. She said she had been notified of her son's engagement to the Atlanta girl, but she had not known of it.

ROOSEVELT SIGNS CODES FOR STEEL, OIL AND LUMBER

Approval of Documents Brings Dramatic Climax to Whirlwind Week of NRA Activity.

By JAMES F. SELVAGE. WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—(AP)—The great steel, oil and lumber industries were pledged tonight to the NRA program of economic stability. Ending a chaotic week of bargaining between the federal government and the nation's mightiest captains of industry, Roosevelt signed codes of fair competition for the three huge industries.

Simultaneously, Hugh S. Johnson, the tired and worn recovery administrator, asserted triumphantly that the turn had been reached and that the goal of all employees under regulated wages and hours to raise purchasing power, was in sight.

Officials estimated that enacted in the wage raising-work shortening codes for the three industries alone were new jobs for over 400,000 workers: 240,000 for oil; 115,000 for lumber and 50,000 for steel.

Their entrance into the program brought to 14 the number of permanent codes already approved, including one for another great basic industry—cotton textiles—and officials forecast that the heaviest opposition had been crushed by the drive of President Roosevelt and Johnson during the week.

As the week of spectacular developments ended, only coal and automobiles of the important industries with codes now pending still were outside the door of the NRA. And there was every indication that the steady pressure of the government would be turned, starting tomorrow, upon the controversy-bound bituminous coal operators.

Members of this group with their 29 codes to be boiled down into one are on notice from General Johnson that they must agree, or unless committee meetings scheduled over the week-end produce positive results, informed quarters had little doubt that the administrator was ready to write a code for that industry as he did for oil.

The automobile industry—still wondering about the attitude of Henry Ford or what his plans were—had its day in court at a public hearing yesterday. Experts and economists are taking the testimony apart word by word, and the code is to be pushed through the mill with all possible speed.

The pell-mell pace that the recovery administrator has set through the week continued right up to the time of President Roosevelt's departure for Hyde Park, N. Y. Through the day Johnson darted from one conference to another. With the steel code agreed to in the early hours of the morning after a long night session, the administrator concentrated upon oil. From one confidential session to another he moved, seeking an agreement among the operators, anxious not to force upon them a code they did not want, but determined that one should be completed before the chief executive departed.

JOB GAINS HERE SPUR NRA DRIVE

Unemployment will be a thing of the past, business will boom and the purchasing power of the public will be restored at the end of an intensive NRA campaign now getting under way if the ratio of increase in payrolls and employment as shown in statistics compiled is borne out, according to a statement by recovery leaders in Atlanta Saturday.

The statement was issued on the eve of a drive to enlist every employer in Atlanta as a member of the blue eagle brigade. An analysis of questionnaires answered by representative business firms revealed that an average increase of 25 per cent has been made in payrolls and 13 per cent in the total number of employees added. The questionnaires were sent only to those firms who have signed under the blue eagle.

Up to noon Saturday 80 firms had reported on the questionnaire and campaign officials said they were representative of general business line. Coincidental with the announcement of wage increases and a great number of employees, Robert F. Maddox, general chairman of the NRA campaign here, and Herbert E. Choate, president of the Chamber of Commerce, issued a joint statement calling for full co-operation in securing NRA agreements from those employers who have not signed.

They said there are nearly 4,000

EVERY COMMODITY CARRIED IN STATE COVERED BY ORDER

Basis of July 1, 1913, Fixed by Board, Would Cut Rate Now in Effect in Georgia on an Average of 40 Per Cent.

RULE NISI AFFECTS 44 ROADS IN STATE

Chairman Wilhoit Says Order Issued After Careful Study of Situation. Hearing To Be Open.

The Georgia public service commission Saturday issued an order citing all of the railroads operating in the state to show cause on October 10 why all freight rates effective in the state should not be restored to the level of July 1, 1913.

The order specifically calls for an answer on class and commodity rates, which will include all freight. Hearing on the order will begin at 10 o'clock on the morning of October 10, Chairman Jud P. Wilhoit, of the public service commission, said in announcing the issuance of the order. The hearing will be held in the senate chamber at the state capital and will be open to the public.

The order is the second blanket rule nisi issued by the commission since its installation by Governor Eugene Talmadge last month, the other blanket rule having been issued against telephone companies. The commission also has cited the railroads on various special rates, but Saturday's order covers everything hauled by the carriers between points within the state.

Followed Careful Study. Chairman Wilhoit said that the order was issued after a careful study of the situation by members of the commission and experts in its employ. George D. Kreuger, railroad rate expert employed by the commission, said that the freight rates now in effect in Georgia average about 40 per cent higher than they were on July 1, 1913.

LABOR DISPUTES BREAK OUT A NEW

Alabama Miners To Decide Today Whether They Will Join Strike.

By the Associated Press.

Labor disputes developed anew Saturday in the coal fields of Alabama and Pennsylvania, while the NRA intermediary—Grover A. Whalen, the former police commissioner—worked through the night to settle last-minute differences of New York City's strike of 60,000 dressmakers.

In Alabama, the United Mine Workers of America called upon Sunday whether they would join in a sympathy strike several hundred workers in Walker county who charged operators with refusing to employ men discharged for carrying a union card.

Quiet has prevailed among those who have already walked out. The Alabama operators said the miners were fired "for cause."

Anthracite miners at Lansford, Pa., who are demanding an equalization of work in the Panther Creek valley mines, said they found no "common grounds" with operators for continuing arbitration under federal and state supervision and needed a strike.

The hard coal miners said they would ask all union members in the district to make a sympathy walk-out.

While the dressmaking strike appeared to be amicably settled in New York City, with the exception of ending the dispute between drivers of trucks in the industry, leaders of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union in Connecticut said there was much work to be done before an accord was reached in that state and in New Jersey.

Whalen conferred last night with officials of the drivers' union affiliate, who object to "pushers," the men who trundle carloads of dresses.

BIG STRIKE OF MINERS LOOMS IN ALABAMA

JASPER, Ala., Aug. 19.—(AP)—Stirred by charges that operators have refused to re-employ men discharged because of union affiliations, 5,000 coal miners were called upon today to join several hundred fellow-workers in a strike in Walker county.

While sheriff's forces patrolled three mines already closed by walk-outs, representatives of the United Mine Workers of America issued a call for mass meetings tomorrow for a vote to determine the course of union members as a whole in the county.

Employees at the Empire and Samoset mines, numbering 400, today joined 100 who quit yesterday at Hull. The DeBardeleben Coal Corporation operates the Empire and Hull mines and the Alabama By-Products Corporation the Samoset mine.

Gathering for a mass meeting today, the striking miners were addressed by leaders who urged them to avoid violence and "go home and stay there until this dispute is settled." Deputies assigned to the strike area said there had been no indication of trouble and that none was expected.

At a meeting of the Hull local of the union miners, the committee was appointed to meet with DeBardeleben officials in an effort to iron out their difficulties but no date was set for the get-together.

Spokesmen for the miners said the men about the strike controversy were centered were discharged in June because of their activity in unionizing the mines and forming the recently organized local.

The charges were denied by the operators who said the men had been dismissed "for cause" and that they had been granted the right to work without joining the union.

C. L. Richardson, representative of the United States department of labor, has completed an investigation of the miners' charges but his findings have not been made public.

MINERS IN PENNSYLVANIA DECLARE TRUCE IS ENDED

LANSFORD, Pa., Aug. 19.—(AP)—Idle anthracite miners who are demanding an equalization of work in the Panther Creek valley tonight declared ended a strike truce brought about by Governor Pinchot, and said they will ask all union miners in the district to resume "a sympathy walk-out."

The decision was reached after producers and miners, meeting with federal and state labor officials, failed "to find some common grounds" to bring about a resumption of operations at the Lehigh Navigation Coal Company, one of the largest anthracite producers in the world.

At the conference were Federal Conciliator Howard Colvin, State Mediator Ambrose Langran, Michael Hartnedy, president of the United Mine Workers of District No. 2, and officials of the subsidiary.

The situation was discussed on the basis of an equalization of working time at all the mines of the company, but Navigation Company officials stated this was impossible because market conditions would not permit of agreeing to such terms.

It was disclosed by the company that the "financial loss faced by such a program would be too great a burden."

Union officials presented a plan by which certain collieries would work on the basis of equalization, but company officials asserted this offer could receive no consideration because dealers demanded certain quality of coal, which necessitated the operation of a certain colliery.

Both the federal conciliator and the state mediator took notes of the discussion, and after it was realized nothing could be accomplished immediately the meeting adjourned.

Colvin and Langran, accompanied by Hartnedy, went back to Hazleton where they will remain for a few days.

In the meantime, the unemployed committee decided that it will carry out its original plan of marching on the Mahanoy City and Shenandoah section on Monday morning.

Men working at the Alliance colliery decided to return to work Monday morning, which brought a statement from the unemployed that they will stage another demonstration to

That player and bridge philosopher, Henry Grady Sr., has come forward with this writer considers a most valuable suggestion—namely, that it is most appropriate at this time of national codification to draw up some kind of code for the bridge players.

I submit the following:

No bridge player, male or female, to play bridge more than 18 hours per day.

No feminine bridge player to compete after 5:45 in the afternoon, if she comes to the masculine side of the house.

No masculine player to compete (if he be married) past 1 a. m. unless he is a champion liar and feels sure he can square himself as to his whereabouts during the evening.

No kibitzer to watch the same game more than two hours and his comments on the play of the hands to be limited to one minute after the completion of each hand.

No husband and wife to ever have to play as partners more than twice each week. No limit on number of times ex-husbands can play as partners with ex-wives.

No game to be allowed three evenings out each week without interference. Wives to be turned loose twice each week without benefit of husband's presence or remarks concerning the play of the hand.

Taking a backward glance over the past week's tournament, competition makes me nominate for the hall of fame Kate Daniel, Vivian Porter and Al Walton. Kate Daniel because she, paired with Vivian Porter, turned in a record score at the afternoon tournament, because she won Mrs. Foster's evening tournament with the Cavendish club tournament.

Vivian Porter because of her record score with Kate. All because of next week. Farn the fine score at Mrs. Foster's and then, paired with Mrs. J. B. Sattles, won the Cavendish club's tournament.

Having taken a peep into the past we now turn our attention to the coming week.

At the suggestion of Bill Meador, tournament and that he expects a call from Fred Shaefer, it was voted at the Cavendish club's Friday evening tournament to hold an individual tournament in a few days.

The regular team-of-four event. But one dissenting vote was cast in the landslide that followed the question, "To revive the form of mild mayhem. Why do you suppose Bill Meador wanted to revive the dead just in time when he was doing so well in team-of-four competition."

Mrs. Carl Vreeman is going to begin a series of lessons followed by a tournament at the White House.

Woman's club at 10:30 o'clock Friday morning.

I have it on "A No. 1" authority that Edward, of the House of No. 1, is the major domo at the Henry Grady Bridge Club, is going to serve orange juice at his Tuesday evening tournament and that he expects a crowd. Fall me in this announcement, Edward, and blackmail of a most terrible nature descends upon thy head.

Someone had better see about stopping this Mrs. R. C. Hale in her mad dash toward the handsome J. B. Sattles, who is going to the Georgia Bridge Club. Two tournaments are history and Mrs. Hale has won both. Well, ten tournaments provide a long stretch and maybe someone can help her out. Just because she has such a fine looking new car in this time of great stress and tribulation is force this plant of Navigation Company from working.

MEDIATION BOARD SENDS RAIL REPORT TO PRESIDENT

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—(AP)—The emergency mediation board created by President Roosevelt to hear the charges of the Southern Railway Company and the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen's monthly payment plan has made its report to the White House.

There is no indication when it will be made public.

The board was appointed after failure of the road management and the labor union to reach an agreement. The controversy involves a method of paying the workers on a trip rather than a mileage or piece-work basis.

GARMENT WORKERS STRIKE THREATENED IN CHICAGO

CHICAGO, Aug. 19.—(AP)—A strike of 10,000 garment workers was threatening today.

The strike was voted last night by officials of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union in protest against refusal of operators to meet their demands for what they termed equitable working hours and wages.

A few hours before they acted 300 employees of the Kimball Tailor Company walked out in a controversy over wages and began picketing the plant.

Bernard Shane, general organizer for the garment workers, said the strike would be called within a few days and would affect workers in towns within a radius of 50 miles of Chicago.

Demand of the union included a 35-hour week, right of collective bargaining, $1 an hour for highly skilled pressers and cutters; 85 cents an hour for machine operators, and $1 a week for finishers.

HEADING MILL WORKERS ENRAGED AT ARKANSAS PARAGOULD, Ark., Aug. 19.—(AP)

Ending a strike that began last Wednesday approximately 100 employees of the Henry Wrape Company, headquarter in the city, returned to work today.

Al H. Wrape, one of the officials, said various new salary schedules acceptable to the workers had been effected. The companies' strike mill which was not affected by the strike also began operating under the new schedule.

PEAR PICKERS RESUME WORK IN CALIFORNIA

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 19.—(AP)—The Santa Clara valley has resumed its pear picking today after a workers' strike had been settled with promises of higher wages.

Timothy Reardon, the governor's mediator, said wages would be increased from 20 cents an hour to 25 to 27 1/2 cents and he would try to get the packers to absorb the increase and relieve the growers.

Drive Gets Out Great Prospective Vote; Candidates Are Active.

According to the importunities of the Atlanta League of Women Voters and 40 allied organizations, an awakened citizenry Saturday piled up a total of 21,428 registrations for the municipal primary, pushed the drive for a registration of 20,000 over the top and was believed to have insured a representative vote in the September 20 municipal primary.

J. Henson Tatum, city clerk and registrar, Saturday afternoon announced the total after a painstaking count of the registration slips.

At the same time 43 candidates for the 22 municipal positions for which nominations will be made, approached no call for her to set the Georgia Bridge Club on fire with her play.

Swings in duplicate at times approach the miraculous. Story of example, a recent team-of-four match in which Ben Conyers and Erskine Jones were partners and Kate Daniel and Don Daniel formed the other half of the team. On one hand Conyers and Erskine took a 2,000 set and immediately made plans to do sackcloth and ashes and go into the wilderness to eat of the locust and wild honey. But to their great joy and relief Kate and Don, playing the hand which Erskine and Conyers played against, hid three no-trumps, got it doubled and redoubled and three extra tricks for a grand total of 2,100 points.

Great things up at Clayton. Maybe it is the mountain air. At any rate, Tom Daniel, one of the famous Daniel trio of bridge players, has just returned from a trip to the mountains with a most astounding story of his partner holding 13 spades. Tom will make oath that the play had proceeded about one hour and a half and that the hand was dealt from a same deck that had been playing with Mrs. F. C. Wilberson was his partner and held the thrill hand.

First, he held the hands and bidding. All he is a champion liar and West the dealer: NORTH.

Drive Gets Out Great Prospective Vote; Candidates Are Active.

According to the importunities of the Atlanta League of Women Voters and 40 allied organizations, an awakened citizenry Saturday piled up a total of 21,428 registrations for the municipal primary, pushed the drive for a registration of 20,000 over the top and was believed to have insured a representative vote in the September 20 municipal primary.

J. Henson Tatum, city clerk and registrar, Saturday afternoon announced the total after a painstaking count of the registration slips.

At the same time 43 candidates for the 22 municipal positions for which nominations will be made, approached no call for her to set the Georgia Bridge Club on fire with her play.

Swings in duplicate at times approach the miraculous. Story of example, a recent team-of-four match in which Ben Conyers and Erskine Jones were partners and Kate Daniel and Don Daniel formed the other half of the team. On one hand Conyers and Erskine took a 2,000 set and immediately made plans to do sackcloth and ashes and go into the wilderness to eat of the locust and wild honey. But to their great joy and relief Kate and Don, playing the hand which Erskine and Conyers played against, hid three no-trumps, got it doubled and redoubled and three extra tricks for a grand total of 2,100 points.

Great things up at Clayton. Maybe it is the mountain air. At any rate, Tom Daniel, one of the famous Daniel trio of bridge players, has just returned from a trip to the mountains with a most astounding story of his partner holding 13 spades. Tom will make oath that the play had proceeded about one hour and a half and that the hand was dealt from a same deck that had been playing with Mrs. F. C. Wilberson was his partner and held the thrill hand.

First, he held the hands and bidding. All he is a champion liar and West the dealer: NORTH.

FARM AID PLANS GAIN MOMENTUM

Wallace Pushes Program Toward Goal of Living Wages for Farmer.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—(UP)—President Roosevelt's agricultural recovery program tonight was gaining size and momentum as rapidly as a snowball rolling down hill.

The program was being accelerated by Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace toward the president's goal of living wages for the farmer. Since congress passed the agricultural recovery act in May, Wallace has imposed processing taxes which affect every citizen in the United States. He has adopted definite plans for improvement of prices in cotton, wheat, hogs, butter, eggs, tobacco, peaches and tomatoes. A United Press tabulation revealed that the growers of these products alone will receive at least $288,500,000 this year directly from Wallace operations. He hopes they will receive many times that sum through improved prices.

He has under consideration campaigns to improve the markets for such diverse products as licorice and oysters, crab meat and sugar, baking powder and beef.

Prepared to Dump Grain.
He is prepared to "dump" wheat in foreign ports if other grain-producing nations refuse to reduce acreage. He is studying reforms in the speculative grain exchanges. He is ready to clamp iron-clad marketing agreements on the nation's strifetorn millmen.

Tabloid descriptions of the administration's major campaigns, together with data on their progress, follow:

Wheat: Growers who promise to reduce acreage this season will receive approximately $90,000,000 from processing taxes. Upon August 24 Wallace will announce the amount of the acreage reduction. In no event will it amount to more than 20 per cent.

Cotton: Planters who have plowed under from 25 to 50 per cent of their crops, will receive immediately checks totaling about $110,000,000. The money comes from a tax of a few pennies on shirts, sheets and other cotton goods. Wallace hopes to announce by the middle of September a long-time cotton program which will eliminate the overproduction bugaboo.

Pig Birth Control.
Hogs: A "pig birth control program" will go into effect immediately, giving raisers a bonus of about $55,000,000 for slaughtering their brood sows and their light hogs. A tax of perhaps half a cent a pound on pork will provide the cash. The resultant meat will go to the nation's unemployed.

Butter: Dairymen have been authorized to set up a $30,000,000 corporation which will hold off the market surplus butter and cheese. The Reconstruction Finance Corporation will advance the money. It will be paid back through a one-cent tax on every pound of butterfat produced.

Tobacco: Cigar leaf growers, who have promised to reduce acreage, will receive about $3,500,000 in processing tax money. Growers of blue-ribbon tobacco, which is used principally in cigars, still have not agreed on a program.

COTTON REDUCTION PLANNED BY COBB FOR 1934-35

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—(AP)—Describing the 1933 acreage reduction program as a "success," C. A. Cobb, farm administration official, said today in a statement "that as soon as it is possible, definite practical program for next year and the year following will be taken to the field."

Cobb said that despite the program for this year, which resulted in an estimated reduction of more than 4,000,000 bales, there was still an excessive supply of cotton.

"Our present situation and the results of the acreage adjustment campaign emphasized the necessity of carrying on," Cobb said. "We have made only a beginning."

Cobb said that if there had been no reduction this year, production would have been around 16,500,000 bales.

"If this full crop had been permitted to mature," he said, "no one can predict just what the price would have been. It certainly would have been materially below the present price and the cotton producers of the south would have again been face to face with dire consequences of four or five-cent cotton."

5-LOCK BOLL COTTON DEVELOPED BY CAROLINIAN

SUMTER, S. C., Aug. 19.—(AP)—Sumter, cotton acreage reduction figures probably will have to be revised for G. C. Rowland, Sumter banker, has developed a new type of cotton, the place of the usual four-lock-boll.

In addition, the new type is an early and blight-proof variety and weighs an average of 15 per cent more than the common staple.

Like a romance is the five-year story of Rowland's painstaking efforts to produce the new type which, he says, produces more cotton for the same amount of work and fertilizer.

Rowland, who has combined farming with his duties as president of the National Bank of South Carolina, of Sumter, first noticed a five-lock-boll of cotton five years ago while walking through one of his fields. He searched the fields and, with considerable effort, located several more. He offered pickers a premium for such bolls and finally he secured quite a number.

During the winter, Rowland and his family picked the seed by hand, a system relegated when Eli Whitney invented the cotton gin in 1793. The next season, these selected seed were planted and the crop again carefully hand-picked for the five-lock-bolls. Again and again, the system was repeated.

TEXTILE MILLS STAGNATION IS BLAMED ON WALLACE

CHARLOTTE, N. C., Aug. 19.—(AP)—David Clark, editor of the Southern Textile Bulletin, and widely known textile authority, in a statement today said Secretary Wallace's insistence upon the floor tax and refusal to put the processing tax upon a graduated scale was responsible for stagnation in the textile industry and prospective idleness for thousands of cotton mill employees.

"The stagnation of the textile industry and the prospective idleness of thousands of cotton mill employees can be placed squarely at the feet of Secretary Wallace," his statement said.

Patrolman Slashed
By Suspected Bandit

Patrolman Charles M. Hajos was cut about the head and throat Saturday afternoon at West Peachtree and Alexander streets by a negro suspected of having robbed a man at knife point.

Hajos shot the man through the hand after suffering slashes about the neck. His heavy service collar saved him from being severely wounded. The negro, who said his name was Phil Davis, was treated at Grady hospital and committed to jail.

Patrolman Hajos and his partner had gone to Courtland and Cain streets in a radio cruising car to answer the call of a man who reported he had been robbed. The suspected negro was sighted at Cain street and Piedmont avenue and chased until the policeman caught up and overpowered him. Joe Porter, another negro, who tried to catch Davis for the police, was stabbed. He was admitted at Grady.

MRS. RICH WINNER OF PRIMROSE PRIZE

Prizes for the best essays on the Primrose Dry Cleaning Plant were announced on Saturday by Sidney Rosenfield, president.

First prize, $25 in cash, was won by Mrs. H. L. Rich, of 67 Thirteenth street, N. W. The second, $10 worth of dry cleaning, was won by Miss Delos Ogletree.

Smaller prizes, to be paid in dry cleaning and laundering, were awarded to 13 others.

You don't have to be an artist, you don't even have to have any great knowledge of art to like the exhibition now at the High Museum of Art. It has been arranged beautifully. The color note struck by the oil paintings is cool and refreshing, with nothing of the bizarre. The decorative wall hangings are most unusual because this is the first known attempt to use air brush technique for decorative work. And the sculpture should prove interesting.

All the wall hangings are done by Miss Minna McLeod Beck, formerly of Atlanta. Miss Beck has taught at many schools, and is at present head of the art department at Alabama State College for Women at Montevallo. The air brush technique which she uses is a tedious process. It is accomplished by a compressed air tank, and an air brush which releases the medium. Masks are used to cover the part of the material upon which no color is desired. One of her most interesting things is the "Birth of Venus," a symbolic color scheme, upon which every line and every gradation of color is significant.

Miss Marion Otis is showing oil paintings. Atlantans will be particularly appreciative of her work, because almost every one is a local landscape. "Druid Hills Way," "Piedmont Golf Course," "Spring Street," which won the Foreman award in 1931. And look at "Stone Mountain," Miss Otis spent the night on the mountain so that she could be there at 4 o'clock in the morning.

Sculpture is being exhibited by Dr. George H. Noble Jr. There are busts of well-known Atlanta people, among them Dean Raimundo de Ovis, Dr. George H. Noble Sr., Maxine Land and the sculptor's two daughters, Mary and Anne Noble. You'll like the bust of January Smith, a negro who has worked at the state capitol for many years. Dr. Noble's work is unusual because he has had no art training and works solely from his knowledge of anatomy.

Julian H. Harris also is showing sculpture. "Negro Head" is one of his most noteworthy. This exhibition opens Tuesday and will be shown until September 15. The museum is open to the public from 9 a. m. until 6 p. m. on week days; from 9 until noon on Saturday, and from 2 until 5 p. m. on Sunday.

JOHN HOLDER EXPLAINS ROAD CHECK SQUABBLE

John N. Holder, former chairman of the state highway board, has written a lengthy reply to A. P. Brantley, of Blackshear, Ga., to an inquiry concerning the charge recently made in an address by Governor Talmadge concerning a highway check alleged to have passed through Mr. Holder's hands.

In his letter to Mr. Holder, Mr. Brantley said: "I know that the facts in regard to any checks issued by the highway department are not as stated in this clipping, and if you will write me what the actual facts are, I will appreciate very much your doing so."

Mr. Holder's reply to Mr. Brantley is as follows: "Jefferson, Ga., August 15, 1933. 'Mr. A. P. Brantley, 'Blackshear, Ga. 'My Dear Mr. Brantley: I am grateful to you for your letter of recent date in which you give expressions of confidence in me. Also, I thank you for calling my attention to a check of Talmadge made at Douglas in which he made certain criticisms against me and members of my family."

"I am a private citizen, and have been for more than twenty years. I hold no office, have no commission, and have no official responsibility, whatever. As a private citizen, I have a legal right to engage in business transactions as any other private citizen. It would have been legal and not improper for me to have sold equipment to the highway department. But I did not sell the equipment mentioned by Talmadge to the department, nor did I in the sale, nor share in the profits of the sale. Neither did I, as a member of my family sell, aid or share in the profits of the sale. Nor did I know anything about this sale until long after it was made."

"The Atlanta Equipment Company, of which Lee M. Cauble is manager, sold to the state highway department some equipment. A full statement of this company follows:

When Governor Talmadge in a speech called attention to an acceptance given the Atlanta Equipment Company for purchase of machinery and parts, I gave no answer, because I thought Captain E. W. Barnett's explanation that millions of dollars of acceptances have been given on the state highway department to different persons and concerns for material, equipment and work, would satisfy any fair-minded person that giving an acceptance is a regular legal and customary, but I have just seen a statement of Governor Talmadge, which says, 'These checks were given for equipment purporting to have been purchased from the Atlanta Equipment Company.'

"Whether they were discounted by the highway department, from chairman to a man, aided in any way, directly or indirectly, to obtain an illegal penny from the department. In fact, no one connected with the department knew he had secured some money to discount the acceptances until so notified by Mr. Cauble."

"Talmadge knows that hundreds of other acceptances like these two, amounting to millions of dollars, have been issued by the highway department, and paid when due, and not a word of criticism has been made. If these were not legal, then none of the other acceptances issued by the department, whether they were for $2,000, or $200,000, were legal."

"I am loath to try your patience with this long letter, but think I am due my friends an explanation, inasmuch as Talmadge continues to insinuate that my dealings in these business transactions were not honest."

"With best wishes, and sentiments of high esteem, I am, 'Your friend, 'JOHN N. HOLDER."

FARLEY SEES VICTORY FOR GOVERNOR LEHMAN

Postmaster-General Kills Rumor That He Will Run for Post.

ELMIRA, N. Y., Aug. 19.—(AP)—Dismissing rumors that he, himself, might be the democratic candidate for governor of New York state, Postmaster-General James A. Farley today predicted that Governor Lehman would be re-elected in 1934—an even greater plurality than in the last election.

"On the basis of his record," Farley said, "we can be assured that New York state will continue during the rest of this and all of next year to be so well governed by this able leader, that the people will call upon him again to serve as chief executive."

Farley, who has been mentioned as Governor Lehman's most likely successor in the event the latter should become secretary of the treasury—another persistent rumor—addressed approximately 10,000 democrats from all sections of the state gathered here to open their drive for control of the state assembly in the November local elections.

"I have never made any prediction with as much confidence," continued the state and national democratic chairman, "as I now predict that in 1934 we will re-elect to the governorship of the state of New York by a greater majority than we elected him in 1932, our democratic incumbent in the executive chair, Herbert H. Lehman."

Beginning the week with rallies this afternoon for junior and intermediate divisions, the Atlanta B. Y. P. U. Association this week launches its thirty-eighth annual training school program. The class work begins Monday morning for the juniors with a session at the First Baptist church from 9 to 11:45. For intermediates, seniors and adults the week's program begins at 6:45 o'clock Monday night, when the faculty of 90 from six southern states will be presented to the audience at the First Baptist church. Silver loving cups and other awards and recognitions will be accorded unions having the best attendance for the week or bringing the best poster to the school.

Today a number of the faculty members will be heard in B. Y. P. U. and church services over the city. W. A. Harrell, of Nashville, Tenn., is to speak at the Gordon Street Baptist church, both at the Sunday school hour and at the morning preaching service. Miss Winnie Rickett, of Raleigh, N. C., and Edwin S. Preston, of Atlanta, are the speakers at the night service in the First Baptist church. Henry Rogers, of Montgomery, Ala., speaks at Woodward Avenue Baptist church Sunday night. E. O. Harbin, of Nashville, Tenn., and others will be heard in other churches throughout the city.

Every age group in the training service for Baptist young people will be cared for in this week of training. There are expected to be fully 600 junior boys and girls from 9 to 12 years of age in the morning sessions beginning Monday. Some 2,500 of all other age groups are expected to gather for the night meetings.

PICTURES TO BE SHOWN
Features of the week include moving pictures of Bible lands presented by William Russell Hamilton, of Louisville, Ky. Group singing, led by E. O. Harbin, of Nashville, Tenn., and two reels of moving pictures of the recent state B. Y. P. U. encampment held at Shorter College in June.

In addition to the classes for juniors themselves during the morning hours there will be two classes for junior leaders. Mrs. W. L. Blankenship, of Atlanta, will teach story-telling methods and materials. Miss Winnie Rickett, of Raleigh, N. C., teaches a class in the junior and intermediate B. Y. P. U. leader's manual.

Moving pictures will be shown Monday, Wednesday and Friday morning and at every night session. The encampment pictures will be shown Thursday night.

The associational intermediate award drill contest to determine the one who can most rapidly find scripture references is scheduled for Tuesday night between the two class periods. Miss Margaret Allen, of Hapeville, intermediate leader of the association, said.

Training School of B. Y. P. U. To Be Opened Here Monday

Outstanding figures who will take part in the 38th annual B. Y. P. U. training school of the Atlanta association, to be held this week, are shown above. Left to right they are Frank Hooper Jr., of Atlanta, who teaches "Parliamentary Law;" William Russell Hamilton, of Louisville, Ky., who will show moving pictures of Bible lands each day, and Arthur O. Hayes, of Atlanta, president of the B. Y. P. U. association.

Beginning the week with rallies this afternoon for junior and intermediate divisions, the Atlanta B. Y. P. U. Association this week launches its thirty-eighth annual training school program. For intermediates, seniors and adults the week's program begins at 6:45 o'clock Monday night, when the faculty of 90 from six southern states will be presented to the audience at the First Baptist church. Silver loving cups and other awards and recognitions will be accorded unions having the best attendance for the week or bringing the best poster to the school.

Today a number of the faculty members will be heard in B. Y. P. U. and church services over the city. W. A. Harrell, of Nashville, Tenn., is to speak at the Gordon Street Baptist church, both at the Sunday school hour and at the morning preaching service. Miss Winnie Rickett, of Raleigh, N. C., and Edwin S. Preston, of Atlanta, are the speakers at the night service in the First Baptist church. Henry Rogers, of Montgomery, Ala., speaks at Woodward Avenue Baptist church Sunday night. E. O. Harbin, of Nashville, Tenn., and others will be heard in other churches throughout the city.

Every age group in the training service for Baptist young people will be cared for in this week of training. There are expected to be fully 600 junior boys and girls from 9 to 12 years of age in the morning sessions beginning Monday. Some 2,500 of all other age groups are expected to gather for the night meetings.

PICTURES TO BE SHOWN
Features of the week include moving pictures of Bible lands presented by William Russell Hamilton, of Louisville, Ky. Group singing, led by E. O. Harbin, of Nashville, Tenn., and two reels of moving pictures of the recent state B. Y. P. U. encampment held at Shorter College in June.

In addition to the classes for juniors themselves during the morning hours there will be two classes for junior leaders. Mrs. W. L. Blankenship, of Atlanta, will teach story-telling methods and materials. Miss Winnie Rickett, of Raleigh, N. C., teaches a class in the junior and intermediate B. Y. P. U. leader's manual.

Moving pictures will be shown Monday, Wednesday and Friday morning and at every night session. The encampment pictures will be shown Thursday night.

The associational intermediate award drill contest to determine the one who can most rapidly find scripture references is scheduled for Tuesday night between the two class periods. Miss Margaret Allen, of Hapeville, intermediate leader of the association, said.

BENJAMIN THAW SR. DIES IN PITTSBURGH

74-Year-Old Pennsylvania Banker Passes After Long Illness.

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 19.—(AP)—Benjamin Thaw Sr., Pittsburgh banker and member of the well-known Thaw family, died today at his residence. He was 74. Death followed a long illness.

He was the father of the World War ace, Colonel William Thaw, member of the Lafayette Escadrille, and a half-brother of Harry K. Thaw. Born in Pittsburgh, Thaw was graduated in 1870 from the Western University of Pennsylvania, now the University of Pittsburgh.

His first job was railroad clerk. Later he entered the coke business, organizing, with his brother William Thaw Jr., the Hecla Coke Company, absorbed by the H. C. Frick Coke Company in 1905.

Mr. Thaw was a trustee of the estate of his father, the late William Thaw, and of the "coke trust" which the elder Thaw established. He was a director of two Pittsburgh banks and of the University of Pittsburgh. He was a member of the University Club of New York, the Graduate Club of New Haven, the Historical Society of Western Pennsylvania, the Automobile Club of America and the Aero Club of America.

In 1896 he married Elma Elizabeth Dows, of Cedar Rapids, Iowa. She was a member of the University Club of New York, the Graduate Club of New Haven, the Historical Society of Western Pennsylvania, the Automobile Club of America and the Aero Club of America.

Besides Colonel Thaw, another son, Benjamin Thaw Jr., and a daughter, Mrs. Lawrence Slade, survive. Also a brother, Dr. Alexander Blair Thaw, and a sister, Mrs. William R. Thompson.

WILLIAM TYNES
BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Aug. 19.—(AP)—William D. Tynes, for 35 years an industrial leader in the Birmingham district, died today following a long illness. He was in his seventieth year.

A native of Itawamba county, Mississippi, Mr. Tynes came here in 1897 and helped organize the Tynes Foundry & Machine Company, of which he served as president since 1916.

Surviving are Mr. Tynes' second wife, the former Miss Mary Ella Pollard, of New Bern, Ala.; one son, William Fisher Tynes, and three daughters, Mrs. R. C. Stobert, Mrs. L. Sevier and Miss Margaret Tynes, of Birmingham; one brother, A. M. Tynes, Shuqualik, Miss., and two sisters, Mrs. B. W. Caldwell, Baldwin, Ala., and Mrs. S. B. Richards, Victorville, Cal.

Funeral services will be held at 4 p. m., tomorrow.

J. L. HATCH
ASHEBORO, N. C., Aug. 19.—(AP)—J. L. Hatch, 65, who for 28 years prior to his retirement a year ago was head of the claim department of the Southern Railway in this state, was found dead in bed at his home of a heart-attack here today.

The body will be sent to Salem, Va., for burial.

SEARS, ROEBUCK AND CO.
SATISFACTION GUARANTEED OR YOUR MONEY BACK

WATERED STOCK!

What benefits do you receive from Atlanta?

If you own no Atlanta real estate, what interest is it of yours whether or not the real estate owner is taxed beyond his ability to pay?

IN SHORT---WHAT DOES IT MEAN TO YOU?

Well---if you live in Atlanta, or in the suburbs and gain your livelihood from Atlanta, YOU RECEIVE DAILY DIVIDENDS FROM THIS CITY WITHOUT WHICH LIFE WOULD BE HARDLY WORTH LIVING!

You are a stockholder in this fourteen million dollar corporation we call Atlanta. Your stock pays you just the same dividends in benefits and service as are received by the man or woman who pays the heaviest taxes.

THE QUESTION IS WHETHER DIVIDENDS YOU RECEIVE ARE WORTH ANYTHING TO YOU AND WHETHER OR NOT YOU WANT TO PROTECT THEM!

What benefits do you---then---as a non-property owner receive?

Imagine, if you can, your City WITHOUT POLICE PROTECTION OR FIRE PROTECTION!

Suppose there was no health protection service---no sewerage system, garbage removal, public hospital, food inspection in restaurants or health examination in schools!

What if there were no streets or the streets were allowed to deteriorate and become impassable? Suppose at night there were no streets lighted!

Would you like to live in Atlanta without an adequate water supply?

SUPPOSE THERE WAS NO PUBLIC SCHOOL SYSTEM!

Add to all these VITAL services rendered you such benefits that help make life in Atlanta enjoyable, such as libraries, public parks, with swimming pools, golf courses, tennis courts, recreation facilities and playgrounds for children---the aviation field---the auditorium---and you have a pretty fair picture of the dividends YOU COLLECT FROM ATLANTA.

Would you care to live here without receiving any of these benefits?

IF NOT---IS THERE ANY REAL REASON WHY YOU SHOULD NOT PAY YOUR PROPORTIONATE SHARE OF THE COST OF PROVIDING THESE BENEFITS YOU ENJOY?

Or, to put it another way---

Is there any good reason why the owner of an Atlanta home or other Atlanta real estate should be forced to pay for these services and benefits you receive while you pay little or nothing?

IS THERE ANY REASON WHY YOUR STOCK IN ATLANTA SHOULD BE WATERED STOCK?

That's what it is---WATERED STOCK---if you invest nothing and at the same time receive your dividends.

It isn't your fault, however, if you are a holder of WATERED STOCK in the corporation of Atlanta. It's not your fault that these gratuities have been handed you on a silver platter all these years. NOBODY CRITICIZES THE NON-PROPERTY OWNER FOR NOT DONATING TAXES OF HIS OWN FREE WILL AS A TOKEN OF LOVE AND AFFECTION!

It's the fault of this unfair theory of taxation of ours---a system that is so unjust that the wonder is that enlightened people have stood for it as long as they have.

But if there are any among the present non-taxpayers who will seek to thwart a fair distribution of the tax burden and endeavor to further enslave the Atlanta home owner and owner of other Atlanta real estate for the benefit of the non-property owner---HE WILL BE CRITICIZED. And, one of two things will happen---

EITHER HE WILL BE FORCED BY THE DEMAND OF THE MAJORITY TO PAY HIS JUST SHARE OF THE COST OF SERVING HIM OR THERE WILL BE FEWER BENEFITS OR SERVICES RENDERED!

Because Atlanta property ownership cannot and will not continue to shoulder the staggering load of 83% of the cost of local government while thousands upon thousands of fellow citizen stockholders pay little or nothing.

AND NO MAN OR WOMAN WORTHY TO BE CALLED AN ATLANTA CITIZEN---NOW THAT THE FACTS ARE REALIZED---WILL WANT THEM TO LONGER DO SO!

FLORIDA MAN ACQUITTED OF WIFE MURDER AT ELLIJAY TRIAL

DEFINES FUNCTION
OF VARIOUS UNITSChancellor Phillip Weltner
Presides Over Important Meeting Held
This Week at Dahlonega

DAHLONEGA, Ga., Aug. 19.—(UP)—A united program of educational services by the university system of Georgia was developed this week by the executive officers of each unit in the system when they met for a three-day conference here and sought to define the functions of the various units and relate same to the life of the individual citizen in the state of Georgia.

The representatives of the university system were organized into a council which will meet periodically in a sustained effort to place Georgia's system of higher education at the service of the people. This, it was pointed out, will be accomplished by a clear definition of the functions of each college, the discussion of research projects, the development of a comprehensive, extensive program of community development, and through close contact with the various industries reported within the state.

While it was pointed out that the first responsibility of each of the colleges is to train the youth of the state into good citizens which will enable them to become intelligent leaders in Georgia's economic, religious, and political life, a program of adult education and community development was distinctly emphasized through the various discussions during the conference.

Several of the sessions were given over to a discussion of teaching, college curricula, and matters academic, but throughout the various sessions there was distinct thought given to the moral and religious value of education and a discussion of ways and means of emphasizing the religious side of the student in the state's educational program.

The meeting was presided over by Chancellor Phillip Weltner, who struck the keynote of the conference when he expressed the belief that Georgia's system of higher education must immediately be placed in close cooperation with state agencies, to the end that "our people may enjoy a fuller and more satisfactory rural and urban life."

WHITE FRIENDS TO AID
COLLEGE FOR NEGROES

MACON, Ga., Aug. 19.—Central City College is an accredited junior college owned and maintained by the negro Baptists of Georgia. It has for many years given valuable training to the negro youth of the state.

During the past several years, however, the college, perhaps more accurately than his white neighbor, has suffered from lack of opportunity to earn a livelihood. Hence he has been unable to support his educational institutions or to give his children much schooling. As a consequence, Central City College, along with many like institutions, has fallen on evil days.

One time this appeared that the college property would be sold to satisfy its mortgaged indebtedness. This catastrophe was avoided through the generosity of James H. Porter.

In addition to providing financial aid for the school, Mr. Porter made a thorough study of the needs of the school and of its possibilities with relation to the improvement of the condition of the negro race in Georgia. With thought of what Tuskegee Institute has meant both to the negro and to the white man in the south, he conceived a plan by which he hoped Central City College may meet the negro's need for industrial and cultural training in Georgia as effectively as these needs are met by the Tuskegee and Hampton institutes.

On July 19 last the executive board of the negro Baptist convention passed resolutions at Yacowson authorizing Mr. Porter to organize an advisory board of white people in Macon to assist the college and to appoint a treasurer who would handle the finances of the school. The board is to assist in fixing a budget for the school but in no way will undertake to interfere with the actual management of the school by the negro Baptists.

Coincident with the organization of this board the negro Baptists in the state, numbering 550,000, are launching a great thanksgiving rally, the purpose of which is to give Central City College a "new deal."

This rally will reach a climax on the fourth Sunday in October. Its objective is to secure a contribution of $1 from each negro Baptist in the state, the money to be forwarded to the advisory board for use in liquidating the debts of the college, making necessary improvements, the creation of an endowment fund and the enlargement of the usefulness of the school. At the same time the advisory board is undertaking to secure contributions among white friends of the school to match the amount raised by the negroes.

Six Thousand Make Pilgrimage To F. D. R's 'Little White House'

WARM SPRINGS, Ga., Aug. 19.—(UP)—More than 6,000 persons from 38 states and two foreign countries have visited the "Little White House" here within the past few weeks, according to the guest register at the guarded entrance to President Roosevelt's part-time home.

The home is guarded day and night by two non-commissioned officers of the Georgia national guard. No one is allowed to enter the "Little White House," now occupied by a friend of the president, but they are admitted to a guard rail within 50 feet of it, and from which they are able to get a fine view.

Visitors to the home come mainly

NRA Restaurant Code
May End Free Coffee

SAVANNAH, Ga., Aug. 19.—(UP)—That extra cup of coffee given free by Savannah restaurants to patrons who like to sip a while after eating is threatened with extinction by the NRA.

A committee of the City Restaurant Association designated to draft a code of fair competition has recommended discontinuance of the practice. All other beverages would be placed in the same category in that respect.

Another recommendation would do away with a custom of pasting menus and prices on cafe windows.

WESTBERRY TRIAL
DOCKETED MONDAY

VALDOSTA, Ga., Aug. 19.—(UP)—For the second time in three years, Austin Westberry, a youth of Manatee, Fla., is docketed to go on trial here Monday for the slaying of W. H. Browning and his wife, aged operators of a gasoline filling station.

R. Z. Chandler, another of the persons charged with the murders to be tried. He was convicted with a jury recommendation for mercy, but the state supreme court granted a new trial. The Hon. J. P. Fugate, another of the defendants, was convicted and is now serving a life sentence at the state prison farm.

Austin Westberry also was convicted, but he was granted a new trial and is now at liberty under bond, pending another hearing.

Erwin and Travers Erwin were indicted simultaneously, but have not been brought to trial. Meanwhile, they are at liberty under bail.

A shotgun charge fired through a window killed Browning as he played cards with his wife the night of August 21, 1930. Mrs. Browning tried to flee, but two men stepped to the open door and shot her twice. She died in a hospital a few hours later.

Authorities advanced robbery as the motive for the slayings. A large sum of money was found in the station.

DUNNING ANXIOUS TO RELINQUISH JOB AS COLLECTOR

SAVANNAH, Ga., Aug. 19.—(UP)—Marion O. Dunning, collector of customs for the port of Savannah and Georgia district, No. 17, requested Governor Russell to expedite the appointment of his successor.

Mr. Dunning's decision to relinquish the duty of collector, considered the major federal political appointment in the state, created a situation of unusual interest in Savannah and necessitates the appointment of a collector to complete his unexpired term. This office is the Browning family, who runs to the end of the calendar year.

Mr. Dunning was first appointed by President Coolidge September 19, 1925, and reappointed by President Hoover.

CULBERTSON SAILS FROM CHILEAN PORT

SANTIAGO, Chile, Aug. 19.—(UP)—William S. Culbertson, United States ambassador here for the last five years, who recently announced his retirement, left for home by airplane today. The foreign minister and a large group of well-wishers saw him off.

OKLAHOMA GRANTED
$312,514 FOR RELIEF

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—(UP)—The federal emergency relief administration today made an allotment of $312,514 to Oklahoma. The grant was made to the state to be used for relief work during April and May.

Total grant to all states, four territories and the District of Columbia, now aggregates $134,708,707 out of the $500,000,000 fund.

10,000,000th Fair Visitor
Weeps as She's Honored

CHICAGO, Aug. 19.—(UP)—Evelyn Reuhman, 16, Stockton, Iowa, was the 10,000,000th visitor to the Century of Progress exposition today. She cried about it.

As she entered the grounds, an impressive array of fair officials greeted her. Several expatriation policemen seized her. Miss Reuhman, bewildered, began to cry.

She then confessed she thought she was about to be arrested for no apparent reason.

Brought before fair officials, she was loaded down with assorted things: A diamond ring, a Japanese pearl, a camera and other mementoes.

The cottage is situated on the grounds of the Warm Springs foundation, founded by President Roosevelt in 1924 for the after-care treatment of infantile paralysis victims.

ROYAL ARCANUM
OPENS SEASIDE MEETING MONDAYDelegates From All States Speeding to Brunswick for Supreme Council Convention.

BRUNSWICK, Ga., Aug. 19.—(AP)—A steamship from Boston and trains from many parts of the country are speeding delegates toward Brunswick for the 55th annual convention of the supreme council of Royal Arcanum beginning Monday.

The meeting will be held at the Cloister hotel at Sea Island and will be in session until Friday.

The ship bringing New England delegates left Boston Wednesday, took on others in New York today and sailed for Savannah. She will reach there early Monday and the delegations will proceed to Sea Island by bus.

The convention program calls for business sessions in the forenoon and a round of dances, card parties, golf tournaments, motor trips and surf bathing in the afternoons and nights.

Preparations have been made for about 300 members of the supreme council, which is composed of leaders of the Royal Arcanum. Practically every state in the nation will be represented.

Julius C. Sipple, of Savannah, is supreme representative to the council for Georgia and Florida.

The convention will be the first held in the south for more than a quarter century.

NRA HIKES RECEIPTS
IN MISSISSIPPI TAXES

JACKSON, Miss., Aug. 19.—(UP)—The blue eagle of the NRA today was credited with stimulating a $5,000 increase in Mississippi's sales tax receipts.

Chairman Alf Stone of the state tax commission said August receipts so far are $143,008.05 as compared with $128,227.30 for the corresponding period of July and the increase was attributed to the efforts of the national recovery administration.

LEGIONNAIRE ASSAULTS
DIRECTOR OF BUDGET

WILMINGTON, N. C., Aug. 19.—(UP)—Colonel R. M. Miller, of Washington, chairman of the national rehabilitation committee of the American Legion, attacked Lewis M. Douglas, director of the budget, and blamed him for cuts made in veterans' disability allowances by the last session of the congress in an address to the state Legion convention here today.

Georgia Couple Observes Golden Wedding
And Marriage of Granddaughter Same Day

Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Barnett, of Colbert, Ga., and Mr. and Mrs. Crawford, the latter having married at the Barnett golden wedding anniversary.

COLBERT, Ga., Aug. 19.—Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Barnett celebrated their golden wedding anniversary this week by taking part in the marriage of their granddaughter, Mary Dell Hix, of Bogart, to Thomas K. Crawford, of Athens.

The cake baked to celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of the Barnett nuptials became the bride's cake for the Hix-Crawford wedding. And one of the most interested attendants was Mrs. Lizzie Sage, who was present at the wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Barnett 50 years ago.

Mr. Barnett was best man at the Hix-Crawford wedding and Mrs. Barnett was matron of honor. The wedding march was the same played at the marriage of the bride's mother and was rendered by the same pianist, Mrs. W. D. Gholston, of Danielsville. Twenty-eight grandchildren and one great-grandchild of the Barnetts were present at the ceremony.

The aged couple were hosts to hundreds of guests from Georgia and South Carolina who had come to felicitate them on 50 years of marital harmony and to be present at the marriage of their granddaughter.

Monday will be devoted to registration and organization, and on Tuesday the regular conference work will begin. "Home Cooperation" will be the subject for study in the morning, and "Relative Values in Living" in the afternoon. Miss Turner and Miss McGee will lead the discussions.

Various forms of recreation will fill the latter part of the afternoon, and an informal party will be given in the evening.

Wednesday morning Miss Edith Creswell, teacher of home economics at the college, will talk on "Planning for the Future." Miss Creswell's talk will be followed by a tour of the campus, a recreation period and dinner.

The conference will close Wednesday afternoon.

The purpose of the conference is to help 4-H club officers, members and leaders in carrying forward their club activities to make a plan for the future, and to give every member present a new inspiration.

WEST VIRGINIA MAN
SENTENCED TO HANG

RIPLEY, W. Va., Aug. 19.—(AP)—Convicted of murder in the first degree, Leo Frazier, 30-year-old Charleston automobile mechanic, was sentenced today to be hanged November 24 for slaying Deputy Sheriff Roy Shamblin.

Thus, West Virginia imposes its second murder verdict on two of the three men who 25 days ago overtook and murdered Sheriff Charles H. Hays, 19, to prison, slaying both him and the deputy. All admitted their parts in the shooting.

Harper's brother, Charles, 21, convicted earlier this week with a recommendation of mercy, is under sentence of life imprisonment. Henry Cano, 26, the third man, is to be retried August 29, the jury having disagreed after hearing him admit driving the car and deny he knew of the contemplated shooting.

COUNSEL SUES HUTTON FOR DAMAGE SUIT FEE

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 19.—(AP)—David Hutton, husband of Aimee Simple McPherson Hutton, the evangelist, had another suit on his hands today with the filing of a recovery action by the law firm which represented him when he lost a breach of promise suit to Myrtle Joan St. Pierre, Pasadena nurse, a few months ago.

Each year the firm, which is headed by W. L. Englehardt, G. J. Oppenard and Mark Jones asked $7,500 in fees from the poorly paying Hutton, now appearing in vanguard, is discharging a $5,000 obligation to Miss St. Pierre in installments.

2 CLEARED OF ARSON
IN CHATSWORTH COURT

CHATSWORTH, Ga., Aug. 19.—A verdict of not guilty was returned by a jury here in the Murray superior court in the case of Dutch Bagley, of Rome, Ga., accused of setting fire to the home of Dr. N. P. Kitchen. Dr. Kitchen, who was indicted at the same time, was freed on a directed verdict of not guilty.

Following Dr. Kitchen's acquittal, M. D. Jefferson, the mayor and leading merchant of this town, was fined for a prolonged demonstration of satisfaction.

Train Kills Man.

MARIETTA, N. C., Aug. 19.—(UP)—An unidentified man about 30 years old fell beneath a freight train here yesterday and was killed. Written on a ticket in his coat was "Antonio R. Santacruz, 1208 11th avenue, Tampa, Fla."

Bartow Milk Dealers
Sign Fair Trade Code

CARTERSVILLE, Ga., Aug. 19. Milk dealers, wholesale and retail, in Bartow county have signed a "fair competition agreement" which will be in effect until a nation-wide code for this industry is adopted by the administration.

Dealers here who have signed are William B. Bradshaw & Sons, wholesale and retail; R. L. Pickard, Jackson's dairy, Mrs. J. D. Smith, Mrs. W. H. Cagle, R. A. Shaw, Mrs. D. D. Cagle, Rock Chapel, Moore, Mrs. F. M. Reeves and Mrs. Gardie Robertson.

14-YEAR BOY HELD FOR FATAL AFFRAY

ELLIJAY, Ga., Aug. 19.—(UP)—Jim Holt, 15-year-old mountain boy, died from knife wounds in a physician's office here early today while the doctor was engaged in taking 75 stitches in the youth's body.

Sheriff W. E. Rackley, of Gilmer county, accompanied by deputies, went to the home of Elmore Alsobrooks, 14, and arrested him for having been the wielder of the knife.

Alsobrooks was placed in jail to await preliminary hearing.

The sheriff said Holt was cut last night near Rock Creek church about 10 miles from here, where revival services were in progress. The sheriff said he knew no reason for the affair.

GIRLS' RESERVATIONS
SET U. OF GA. MARK

ATHENS, Ga., Aug. 19.—The largest advance reservation of rooms in women's dormitories the University of Georgia has ever known, a figure not yet disclosed, is reported by Mrs. Alex Rhodes, dean of women. Four out of the nine dormitories are completely filled, and three others have only a few places left.

Reasons given by girls from these far-away places for coming to Georgia to school vary as widely as the localities of their homes. For instance, some from the north are coming to get a taste of the "deep south," while one girl is coming to get "up farther north." She is from Florida, and she is coming to get "up farther north."

Several choices of Georgia because of the climate of their native states is so rigorous, but the girl from Hawaii is coming because the Hawaiian climate is so mild. Her father is afraid for her to go to a cold place after spending so long a time there.

The girl from Oklahoma wants to spend the winter in a higher altitude than her native state affords, and the girl from Kansas wants a good climate combined with a good school. She says the University of Georgia satisfies both requirements.

MANY APPLICANTS FOR WASHINGTON P. O.

WASHINGTON, Ga., Aug. 19.—(UP)—September 5 has been set by the United States civil service commission, as the final date for applications for postmaster at this office.

Five formal applicants who have been recommended by the commission are C. Howard Orr and Thomas W. Cozart, former members of the legislature from Wilkes; P. D. Howard, head of the Georgia State Police, and J. B. Irvin, chief of the county board of commissioners, and K. Irvin Fanning, one-time holder of the position he again seeks. Others, including two women, have been mentioned and may qualify before September 5.

TWO BROTHERS HELD FOR SHOOTING NEGRO

McDONOUGH, Ga., Aug. 19.—Paul Chamblee, 20, and his brother, Melvin Chamblee, 18, of McDonough county, were lodged today in the Henry county jail to await developments in the shooting of Henry Still, negro, of the same community. According to a statement issued from the office of Sheriff L. D. Hightower, the trouble, leading to the attack, was the alleged theft of an automobile belonging to the two youths, who broke down in front of Still's home on Saturday night. When they returned on Sunday for the car, the three men who 25 days ago overtook and murdered Sheriff Charles H. Hays, 19, to prison, slaying both him and the deputy. All admitted their parts in the shooting.

SCHOOL OPENING SET FOR CARTERSVILLE

CARTERSVILLE, Ga., Aug. 19.—W. H. Tucker, superintendent of the Cartersville public schools, announces that the opening date for the fall term has been set for September 13. Children will register on Monday and Tuesday, September 11 and 12.

9-HOUR HEARING ENDS IN FREEDOM
FOR R. W. RANDALLWoman Died in Auto Wreck, But State Contended
Crash Was Premeditated.

ELLIJAY, Ga., Aug. 19.—(UP)—R. W. Randall, of Fort Myers, Fla., was acquitted of charges of murdering his wife at a preliminary hearing here today. Mrs. Randall was killed July 28 when their automobile overturned near White Pass, Ga.

The hearing today was held before Justice of the Peace W. S. Henson on a warrant charging murder sworn out by Scott Gregory, a detective sent here to investigate the death by relatives of Mrs. Randall at Madison, Florida.

Twelve witnesses were presented by the state in the hearing that lasted for more than nine hours. The state contended Mrs. Randall was killed and the automobile wrecked in an attempt to make the death appear an accident. The defense presented no witnesses.

Mrs. Randall was killed while motoring near the Randall summer home at White Pass. The automobile left the road, ran over an embankment and was wrecked on jagged rocks. Her skull was crushed. Gregory, a former sheriff at Madison, testified he found what he believed to be footprints on the running board and fender of the automobile, and advanced the theory that Mrs. Randall was slain and her body driven to the place of the accident.

Randall, who was driving the car at the time, received only minor injuries. A Blue Ridge (Ga.) undertaker testified that he saw several marks on the sides and back of Mrs. Randall's head and that they could not have been made by her head striking the rocks.

A Madison (Fla.) physician testified to the marks on the head and said they could not have been received in the accident.

After the state's testimony was completed, Randall's attorneys said they would offer no evidence and contented themselves with arguments. Hundreds of citizens of this section attended the hearing.

Congressman John S. Wood, of the ninth Georgia district and J. Bowers Campbell, of Fort Myers, Fla., were among counsel for the defense and Judge C. E. Davis, of Madison aided the prosecution.

2,500 NEW JOBS SEEN
IN YOUNGSTOWN AREA

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio, Aug. 19.—(UP)—Steel mill executives here estimated today that when the new code for the industry takes effect about 2,500 more workers will be added to the pay roll in the Youngstown district, at the present rate of mill operations.

This number would be in addition to the hundreds of men who already have gone back to work as mill activity speeded up this summer and as plants began putting the 40-hour week into effect.

THROWN FROM AUTO, WOMAN IS INJURED

Tossed from an automobile occupied by two men and another girl in old Campbell county, Pearl Bliven, of a Kanter street address, was slightly injured early Saturday night, according to county police reports.

County Policemen West and Roberts said the woman was found by the side of the road by residents in the Tall section of old Campbell. She was bruised about the shoulders but was not taken to a hospital. She refused to give police the names of the assailants, nor why she was thrown out. Witnesses described the car and a clue to the identity of the driver was given police.

TEN PERSONS DIE IN TWO ACCIDENTS

Hit-and-Run Van Kills Six as It Forces Truck From Road.

By the Associated Press.

Ten persons were killed in two high-way accidents in Indiana today while other mishaps on the road claimed additional lives and rolled up a large toll of injured.

Six were killed near South Bend when a bus, improvised from a farm truck and carrying 30 persons home to Elkhart county from the World's Fair, was sideswiped by a large van which sped on, leaving the dead and injured scattered over the pavement.

A few hours later a party of six drove onto the Wabash tracks in Fort Wayne and was struck by a passenger train. Four were killed.

Fourteen were injured in the Indiana wrecks.

At Moorestown, N. J., Grace Whittan, of Fairview, N. J., was killed in a collision of five automobiles and a wagon. Seven were hurt.

Six were injured, one critically, as a bus bound from New York to Buffalo skidded near Elbridge and plunged over an embankment.

At York, Pa., a coroner's jury charged the death of Dr. John Davis, 26, of Ashland, Ky., to an automobile accident August 8.

DEATH RIDES HIGHWAYS IN NORTHERN INDIANA

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Aug. 19.—(AP)—Death rode the highways in northern Indiana early today and the lives of 10 persons were snuffed out near South Bend and Fort Wayne. Fourteen others were injured, most of them seriously.

Shortly before dawn an improvised bus, carrying 30 passengers returning to their homes in Elkhart county after a visit to the Chicago fair, was sideswiped by a heavily-laden van six miles west of here.

Fearing away the left side of the farm truck, the van dealt death to six and injuries to a dozen others. The van sped on, its driver refusing aid to the victims strewn along the road.

A few hours later, another party of six persons from Toledo, Ohio, drove onto a Wabash railroad crossing in Fort Wayne in front of a passenger train. Four were killed and two others seriously hurt. They were en route to Kentucky on a vacation trip.

The dead in the South Bend accident were:

Mrs. Walter Berkey, 23; Walter Berkey, 26; Mrs. Mary Hunsberger Wisler, 26; Wayne Pippenger, 16; Gerald Messmore, 17; and Kenneth Lechlitter, 16, all of Wakarusa, Elkhart county.

Those killed in the Fort Wayne wreck were:

James R. Gray, 39, of Toledo, Ohio; Mrs. Gray; Nettie Blanche Gray, 8, a daughter; and Mrs. Ella Thomas, age about 38, of Princeton, Ky. The injured are Izzetta Gray, 12, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gray, fractured skull and internal injuries; and Mabel Marie Gray, 4, another daughter.

Coroner B. J. Bolka, of South Bend, placed the blame in the accident here on the driver of the overland van.

The load of World's Fair visitors had left Chicago shortly before midnight. The farm truck had wooden benches on either side for the occupants. The passengers dozed as the vehicle proceeded homeward. Without warning the van flashed into view and bore down on the truck.

The only clue was a strip of heavy tire which was ripped from one of the wheels. Authorities in cities from South Bend to Chicago were notified to watch for the damaged van.

GIRL IS KILLED, 7 HURT.
IN NEW JERSEY CRASH

MOORESTOWN, N. J., Aug. 19.—(AP)—A 19-year-old girl was killed and seven persons were injured in the collision of five automobiles and a wagon early today.

Grace Whittan, of Fairview, was nearly decapitated as she was hurled through a windshield.

The multiple accident occurred on the Camden-Moorestown road, a mile from here, during a fog.

One of the automobiles struck the wagon and two cars crashed into the wreckage, all of the injured being in these cars. Two other machines also hit the tangle but their drivers hurried on, some of the victims said.

TRAFFIC STUDY SHOWS VIOLATIONS OF CODE

Infractions by 207 Drivers
Are Checked by Atlanta
Motor Club.

Checks made last week on traffic violations at five intersections in Atlanta revealed that flagrant violations of the traffic code are not decreasing at a rapid rate, Jack Strouss, secretary of the Atlanta Motor Club, reported Saturday.

Strouss' figures showed a total of 207 violations last week, as against 239 over the same period of time at the same corners three months ago. "Automobile driver are ignoring red lights and other traffic signals at about the same rate as three months ago," Strouss said.

"In May, at five intersections 60 drivers crossed against red lights within a 30-minute period. During the last count, 47 drivers failed to stop for red lights at the same intersections during the same period of time. Crossings on amber lights totaled 81 this week as against 97 in May, and right turns on red lights without stopping totaled 70 this week as against 82 in May."

Checkers made counts at the following intersections: Ponce de Leon and Piedmont, Peachtree and Fourteenth, Edgewood and Ivy, Forsyth and Hunter and Courtland and Harris.

Drivers of several delivery trucks were the worst offenders noticed, especially on making right-hand turns against red lights without stopping. Strouss said. "The figures show why Atlanta's 1933 accident records are leading the nation," he said. "These figures for 30 minutes for five corners, if multiplied by all corners in the city, would show an appalling number of violations every hour in downtown Atlanta. We must stop these violations to make our streets safe. Careful driving will result only when violations are checked and held in control."

Recital Planned.

Herman McClair, tenor, and Hazel Shanks, pianist, will give a recital Tuesday evening, August 22, in the Flipper Temple A. M. E. church, of which the Rev. H. M. Parker is pastor. Classical numbers and negro spirituals will be sung. The public is invited.

BOY, 10, TIES SELF TO AUTO AND JOINS BROTHER IN GRADY

The Harris boys, Marshall, 9, and Robert, 10, are on the up and up now, and in the circumstances it is a bit startling, or something.

While playing in a vacant house Friday, Marshall, whose parents live at 175 East Fair street, took a couple of long drinks from an old jug he and a playmate found in a closet. An hour later he was laid out at Grady hospital with physicians treating him for an acute case of alcohol poisoning.

Brother Robert went to see him Saturday. Robert showed up with cuts and bruises all over his body. He had tied one end of a rope about a wrist and the other end around a gadget on the rear of a parked automobile. The automobile didn't stay parked and when Robert finally convinced the driver that he was tagging along, various parts of his anatomy had been dragged half a block.

Marshall was said to be out of danger Saturday. Robert said he was plenty sore.

Railroads To Offer Bicentennial Rates

Railroads operating in the southeast will offer reduced fares to Atlanta and Savannah this fall during three major events of the Georgia bicentennial celebration, C. B. Rhodes, chairman of the Southeastern Passenger Association, has advised Albert H. Rogers, executive secretary of the Georgia bicentennial commission.

The all-Georgia program, "Yesterday and Today," to be staged in Atlanta; the second meeting of the governors of the original 13 states, also to be held in Atlanta, and the celebration, scheduled for Savannah at which President Roosevelt will deliver a radio address to the nation, are the events for which the reduced fares will be operative.

Selling dates and time limits for the reduced fares will be announced when the dates of the bicentennial events are definitely fixed.

122d Band Leaving; Show To Raise Fare

While the 122nd Infantry band are speeding toward Chicago, this afternoon two showings of "The Big Broadcast," a picture of radio life, will be given at the Paramount theater in order to raise funds for the band's transportation. Admission will be 40 cents and 25 cents and the first show will start at 2 o'clock and the second at 4.

In addition to the showing of the feature film, which is regarded as one of the best pictures of the year, there will be a new reel, a comedy and a cartoon. Two full hours will be spent in each of the two shows. Doors will be open several minutes before the films start running in order that early arrivals may be seated.

The band was sent to Chicago to aid in celebration of Georgia Day at the Century of Progress Exposition Wednesday. The organization, composed of 42 pieces, is one of six bands invited to participate in a radio broadcast over a national network Wednesday night.

PUBLIC WORKS FUNDS NOT FOR U.S. BUILDINGS

As a result of what appears to be a general misunderstanding, members of the Georgia delegation in congress are being importuned by numerous communities desiring new postoffice buildings to take these projects up with the Georgia public works board.

This the congressmen cannot do, as such structures do not come under the supervision of the various public works boards. All postoffice buildings are constructed from special funds allocated by congress to the postoffice department and are designated and supervised by that department, it was explained Saturday.

The public works fund was specially set up by congress for construction outside of that which is already under federal supervision and it is only these new projects over which the board has supervision.

Low Commodity Prices in U. S. Amaze Student Home From France

Amazement at the lower price of commodities in America than in France and the "conviction" that the French have solved their problem of life in a more satisfactory manner than have Americans, was the first impression of an Atlanta student who has returned after a year of study of the French language at the University of Bordeaux and the University of Paris.

Docking at New York last Tuesday, Carlos Lynes Jr., was amazed at the low prices, he said. He came on to Atlanta to reside for the present with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Carlos Lynes Sr., of 802 Frederica street, northeast.

Mr. Lynes, who is only 22 years old, discussed the economic comparison of France and America and said that while French people are happier than Americans, "they have a better philosophy of life and an understanding of simpler things."

The young student was graduated at Emory University in 1932, receiving an A. B. degree in literature. He will re-enter the university this fall and expects to receive his master's degree in romance languages next year. After that he expects to teach, he said.

Loved ones need you!

—you dare not fail them

Is YOUR appetite poor? If you tire easily what does it mean? ... and how can you correct it? Do you lack resistance to infectious diseases—pimples and boils... what does this indicate?

These are symptoms which often harass rundown, anemic persons. It is in these complaints that S.S.S. is very useful.

Modern medical research stresses the need of building up, frequently, the blood's red-cells and their hemo-glo-bin (skin and tissue purifier) content. The reason of this is that hemo-glo-bin carries oxygen from the lungs to all parts of the body—even to the skin.

Don't take chances. Infectious diseases strike without warning. Loved ones need you! You dare not fail them. Keep up your strength and resistance thru the blood.

S.S.S. is a proven Tonic... by experience for over 100 years... by modern medical research.

Take S.S.S. just before meals. No need to change your diet... S.S.S. will not interfere with any other medicine you may be taking. Begin a course of it today—then note your improvement. You will be happy with the beneficial results obtained. At all drug stores in two sizes. The larger size is more economical.

Clouds and Showers

For Atlanta Today

"The forecast is getting more or less stereotyped these days—partly cloudy with showers in the afternoon," George W. Minding, United States meteorologist, said Saturday as he predicted for today—partly cloudy and showers.

"This is the season for showers, and a storm coming up from the east gulf will bring us some more," the weatherman said. "Temperatures will remain about the same, with a range of 66 to 84 Sunday." Temperatures Saturday ranged from 67 to 86 degrees.

1931, 1932 and 1933, the 1933 reduction averaging 7 per cent, Longino said. "The county has cut the cost to the taxpayers from a 1928 revenue of $4,600,000 to a 1933 income of $3,400,000 through assessment reductions," he said.

F.D.R. En Route to Hyde Park After Busy Week in Capital

President Puts Final Touches to National Recovery Program Before His Departure.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—(AP)—President Roosevelt turned again tonight toward his ancestral home at Hyde Park after a week of strenuous and varied activity at the White House.

Before leaving for the Hudson river estate where he plans to spend two more weeks, the president kept close to his desk to put the final touches to his national recovery program.

The whole scope of domestic affairs was reviewed by the busy and confident executive in his last day at the White House. His calendar was reserved at all times for the national recovery administration leaders and their codes for oil, steel and coal.

He packed his bags tonight apparently happy and well pleased with the progress he had noted and helped to direct in an intensive week of activity at his desk. He will return on Labor Day—the time set for full enforcement of the NRA order for American industry.

The special train carrying the president was due at Highland, N. Y., across the river from Hyde Park, early tomorrow morning, from where he will motor to the family residence.

During the day, Mr. Roosevelt gave consideration to both the industrial and public works programs, cleared his desk of a batch of pending nominations, delved into the first serious railroad labor dispute to come before him—the Kansas City Southern controversy—and went thoroughly over the plans for the Tennessee valley development.

Arthur E. Morgan and David E. Lilienthal, of the Tennessee Valley Authority, reviewed with the president progress and policies for the future on the vast improvement for the Tennessee valley area.

Joseph B. Eastman, the railroad co-ordinator, was called in by the president to talk with C. M. Johnson, president of the Kansas City Southern, on the labor dispute on that line.

Secretary Ickes went over the public works plan and the president arranged to see about officials in connection with this job-making $3,300,000,000 program.

PARTY TO LEAVE TODAY ON ALABAMA JAIL TOUR

George F. Longino, chairman of the Fulton county commission, and Dr. W. L. Gilbert, member of the commission, today will lead an excursion of county and city officials to Birmingham for an inspection of the new courthouse and jail in that city in connection with plans to combine the city and county jails here.

In the party will be C. P. Vaughan, foreman, and five members of the July-August term Fulton grand jury, Councilman Dan Bridges and Alderman Frank Reynolds, and Hugo Couch, member of the joint city and county committee. The trip will be made by automobile.

Real Estate Board Bulletin English Type Suburban Home Shows Variety of Material

This style of house, a very popular one, requires careful treatment. It is featured by a variety of building material.

This type of English suburban house is one of the most popular of all designs, and requires, as a result, unusually careful treatment.

In this case a variety of building material has been used to suggest the English origin of the plan, but there has been a careful avoidance of too many exterior details—such as the multiplicity of mullioned windows of odd shapes that afflict many similar houses.

Besides the three usual downstairs rooms, and a hall and entrance vestibule of ample size, there are two bedrooms.

A brick base surmounted by a limestone sill runs round the house. Above the all stucco, half-timbered, and chapeau, the chimney is a very handsome and an essential part of the exterior design.

It is probable the house could be built for $8,000 in most localities.

Members of the Atlanta Real Estate Board will be guests of William J. Davis, president of the Atlanta Title & Trust Company, at a fish fry at his farm on the Chattahoochee river next Saturday afternoon.

Members are directed to drive out the Howell Mill or Pace's Ferry road to the river, and cross the bridge. The entrance to the farm is on the right just past the river.

Mr. Davis is host every year to the real estate men.

Cross Sections of Life in Gate City of South

Grover C. Cape, of Avery & Lowndes Company, who was injured last Monday night in a motorcycle accident, is improving at an Atlanta hospital, it was reported Saturday.

Atlanta Bar Association will hold a watermelon cutting at 4 o'clock Tuesday afternoon in the rear of the Fulton courthouse as a campaign is started for new members, Robert C. Alston, president, announced Saturday. All lawyers are invited to attend. It was said. Purpose and program of the association will be announced by Mr. Alston and several other members at the watermelon cutting.

Paving of Genessee avenue and other important matters will be discussed at a meeting of the Ten Ward Civic League at 7:45 o'clock Monday night at the Capital View Masonic club temple, it was announced Saturday by Ernest Brown, secretary.

Captain Raymond Brown, former assistant to Adjutant Vincent Cunningham, who directed Atlanta publicity for the last three years, has been appointed in command of Salvation Army activities in Jackson, Miss. Prior to coming to Atlanta, Captain Brown directed work of the army in Galveston, Texas.

Harry L. Hopkins, federal relief administrator, will be in Atlanta next Monday to obtain information on unemployment relief conditions. His stop here will be made by plane. Tour of 10 states, to be made by plane.

Joseph C. Greenfield Lodge No. 400, was graduated from high school in about 1919 with the highest honors of any pupil in Hancock county.

Jackson said she first learned that her father was Miss Merrill when she was quite small, that she made trips to Mississippi and that Miss Merrill came to Indiana.

Of course we never can tell how a lawsuit will come out," Jackson said, "but we feel that we have sufficient evidence to prove that Mrs. Grist is the daughter of Miss Merrill."

We have an eye-witness to the birth of the baby and we have other persons, well-known in Indianapolis, who knew Miss Merrill."

He declined to reveal the names of those persons.

He said the reason for the long delay in filing the suit to contest the wills, Jackson explained that a large part of the time was taken up in accumulating evidence. He made a trip to Natchez in December to interview persons in that neighborhood and look over the Merrill estate.

While relating incidents of his trip to Natchez, the former secretary of the law partner interposed with the statement that Miss Merrill's personal property was appraised by him at $75,000 and that in addition she had two plantations in Louisiana of about 1,200 acres. There also was the family home near Natchez.

When asked as to birth records, Jackson pointed out that there were no such records kept in Indiana at the time of Mrs. Grist's birth and added "our contention, of course, is that Miss Merrill came to Indiana for the purpose of avoiding any record of the birth of the child."

He said that distant relatives of the woman in Mississippi knew something of the child in Indiana but that they were not acquainted with the complete facts.

During his term as governor, Jackson was charged with having attempted to bribe former Governor Warren McCray, Jackson was secretary of state during McCray's administration and later was elected governor. Jackson was acquitted on the ground of the statute of limitations.

SEATTLE, Aug. 19.—(AP)—After nearly four years on wolf-ridden trails, through ice and storms and the short arctic summers, the great reindeer trek led by Andy Bahr has reached the banks of the Mackenzie river in northwestern Canada.

Only the crossing of the river remains, when ice again seals the streams, and the trip to deliver the herd of about 2,100 reindeer to the Canadian government's experimental station on Richard island will be ended.

Delayed weeks in getting word to the outside world, Bahr finally got a message from the headquarters of the large reindeer concern by which he is employed, with headquarters here.

He had reached the Mackenzie after a journey of from 1,000 to 1,500 miles. Back of a brief message, however, lies a tale of bitter hardships.

In midwinter, early in 1929, Bahr, with a few toughened assistants, left the Kotzebue sound region of western Alaska. The herd had been sold to the Canadian government, as the expected forerunner of herds to provide food and clothing for natives of the northwestern territories.

During the first winter, wolf packs stampeded the herd and they were not reassembled for weeks.

In the summer camp on the Tundra the next year, the herd split up and the groups drifted miles apart.

In March, 1931, good rain out. But Pilot Joe Crosson, of the Alaska mail service, brought the party 1,000 pounds of food.

JAMAICA REBUILDS

KINGSTON, Jamaica, Aug. 19.—(AP)—Reconstruction work was going forward today to provide homes for Jamaica residents whose houses were destroyed in the storm on Wednesday in which 44 persons were killed.

Governor Slater started a relief fund to care for the 50,000 persons in distress. The wind ruined 1,500,000 banana stems.

Lightning Breaks Glass In Auto, Driver Unhurt

JACKSON, Miss., Aug. 18.—(AP)—Glenn A. Gerhart, a traveling salesman, returning home from Mississippi in a storm last night, said a bolt of lightning went through his automobile, crashing the glass in three doors. He was unhurt.

Boy's Tongue Bitten Making Face at Dog

BLUEFORD, Ind., Aug. 19.—(UP)—Raymond Mossburg was certain today that his dog knows that sticking out one's tongue is no compliment. The youth tried to tease his pet by making faces. Then he stuck out his tongue. The bound promptly jumped at his face, bit his snapping. Two teeth pierced Mossburg's tongue.

Tropical Disturbance 1,100 Miles Off Tampa

HAVANA, Aug. 19.—(AP)—A small tropical disturbance of slight intensity that brought rain and gusty winds to western Cuba where it passed two days ago was reported by the national observatory today as 1,100 miles southwest of Tampa, moving either north or northeast. No damage was done in Cuba by the storm.

Another disturbance which Director Jose Carlos Mestas of the observatory said he believed was of full cyclone proportions was somewhere northeast off the northern group ofeward Islands, probably moving westward. Nothing out of the ordinary had no direct observations on this storm, Director Mestas indicated it might possibly pass south of the Bermudas.

A third disturbance was located in the central Caribbean sea, Dr. Mestas said, but on this, also, he had no direct observations. He believed it to be of slight importance.

Large Field Expected for Georgia State Tennis Tourney

BILLY REESE WILL DEFEND SINGLES TITLE

Bryan Grant Seen as Entry August 28 at Biltmore Club.

By Jack Troy.

The tournament-a-month club will offer another outstanding tennis event starting Monday, August 28, the Georgia state championship.

The Biltmore Tennis Club easily qualifies as the tournament-a-month club, the spring and summer months having seen some outstanding event being staged on the courts each month.

Tilden and his troupe played there in May, the southern junior and boys' championship was staged in June, the southern senior championship in July, and now the Georgia state is to be held Monday week.

RESE CHAMPION.

Bill Reese, tall Atlanta star, is the defending champion. That he will be hard pressed to retain his title is indicated by the large Atlanta field anticipated.

Officials of the Biltmore club expect one of the largest girls' fields in history to compete. Leading tennis stars from many cities are expected.

There is a possibility that Bryan Grant, southern, Cotton States and tri-state champion will enter in the event that the distinctive Biltz bids for the title, he will be installed as favorite.

Entry blanks have been mailed out to all prospective entrants. The tournament committee includes Billy Reese, chairman; D. H. Lippett Jr., Jack Simpson, Jack Mooney, Malon Courts, Stewart Morris and George Niles.

The co-owners of the Biltmore club, who are determined to establish Atlanta as a leading tennis center of the south, announce there will be another outstanding event of some kind staged on the courts in September.

DIRECTOR GENERAL. D. H. Lippett, Stewart Morris, George Niles and Billy Reese are the director generals of the club.

These four horsemen of Atlanta tennis are carrying the message to all who care to listen. It is their intention to eventually make Atlanta as tennis-conscious as any city of this size in the country.

There is no reason why they should not succeed. The talent is here; it will be developed. And when it is, Atlanta will take its place ahead of all the rest.

Atlanta is the gate city of the south. Why not make it the tennis center? The four horsemen of the Biltmore club ask.

WHITNEY PULLS IRON MAN STUNT

Gordon Street Gideons won the championship for the first half of the schedule in the Western league of the Southwest Sunday School Athletic Association Saturday afternoon at Almond Park by defeating the Oakland City Methodists both games of a twin bill, taking the first 8 to 5 and the second 2 to 1.

"Cheeky" Whitney pitched both games for the Gideons. Besides pitching good ball he hit safely in the first game and collected on a lone hit in the second. He gave up eight hits in the first game and five in the second.

Shoemaker, pitching for Oakland City in the last game gave up five hits.

The victory over the Methodists entitles the Gideons to a checkered association championship as they have almost clinched the last half of the schedule.

FIRST GAME. Gordon Street Gideons 210 311 000—5 11 6 Oakland City Methodists 000 011—5 8 1 Cannon and Avery, Whitney and Stephens.

TENORIO, WEBB HEAD CAIN CARD

Lope Tenorio, Filipino boxer, returns tomorrow Wednesday night to the Cain Street arena meeting California Billy Webb, in the main bout of Jack Gilbert's weekly card. The bout is scheduled for 10 rounds.

Those who have witnessed Tenorio's other two battles here will welcome the return of the scrapping islander who put Frankie Allen away in six rounds and came back to box a draw with Cliff Greenwood. He has fought many other famous fighters including Billy Petrolle, King Tur, Ray Miller, Cecil Payne, Billy Wallace, Baby Stribling and others.

Matchmaker Gilbert presents a new face to the fans Wednesday night when Lope Tenorio appears with a suitable opponent in the semi-windup. Pickle is an Atlanta boy.

Several good preliminaries will open the card and a sack battle royal will open the festivities. In accordance with the Cain street custom, ladies will be admitted free provided they are accompanied by paid admission. Prices remain the same and tickets may be secured at Five Points Soda Company.

JUNIOR TOURNEY OPENED TO ALL YOUNG GOLFERS

Ansel Park Course Will Be Scene of Opening Monday.

By Roy White.

Atlanta's junior golfers will have their rounds this week when the annual tournament will be played at the Ansel Park course. The qualifying rounds will be played Monday, starting at 8:30 o'clock, with matches scheduled during the remainder of the week.

A record entry is assured for the annual event, as 42 youngsters have registered into Saturday afternoon and many more are expected to sign up before the qualifying starts Monday.

The tourney is being sponsored by the Atlanta Golf Association, with the co-operation of the Ansel Park Club.

There will be no entry fee or trophies and prizes will be given to the winner and runner-up in each flight, and there will be as many flights as necessary to take care of every entrant. No youngster will be refused.

NO ENTRY FEE.

It was due to the unusual interest shown last year by the youngsters that officials of the Atlanta Golf Association decided to sponsor the tourneys and eliminate the entry fee thus giving more players an opportunity to participate.

Charles Barnes, the 1932 winner, and Stanley Holditch, runner-up in 1934, have passed the age limit, leaving the field wide open for keen competition.

Every player in the city who has not reached 16 years, five months and 25 days of age is eligible and invited to play. But about the only question whether or not he is a member of a club.

Entries can be filed with Tom Wilson, the Ansel Park professional today and paid for by the entrant. Late entries can be filed Monday, as long as time will permit playing of 18 holes during the last afternoon. But about the only question whether or not he is a member of a club.

BARNES AGAIN. Luke and Ralph Barnes, young brothers, and Pete, who turned in several good cards, but in other rounds their play was not so spectacular. Carroll Voorhis is a brother who has played well in previous years.

Several members of the West End Club, which recently defeated the Ansel Park juniors in a dual match, have shown promise during practice.

ESSEX TERRAPLANES WITH RADIO SHIPPED

Shipments have started from the Hudson factory on the de luxe model Essex Terraplane, stated to be the first providing radio as standard equipment. The receiving set, the latest automobile type, is built into the car at the factory, and incorporates a generator designed to prevent battery drainage through continued use of the radio set. The new cars were introduced at the distributor meeting last week to meet the demand for individuality of appearance and more luxurious and complete equipment.

The de luxe cars, which are provided both on the six and eight-cylinder Terraplane chassis, have air wheels and tires and are equipped with the latest type of automobile radio. The cars are provided with special painting, the fender colors harmonizing with the body finish and the radio grille chrome plated. The painting is a two-tone combination with the fenders carrying the same two-tone coloring as the body.

Among the other special equipment provided on the de luxe model are twin horns, two tail lamps with chrome brackets, cigar lighter, walnut finish instrument panel, two ash receivers in instrument panel, latest type Majestic radio, special generator and volt regulator, draft deflectors (except on the convertible model), fender lamps and 6x16 tires.

Were this extra equipment purchased separately it would sell for $180. On the two de luxe models, however, it is offered for $80 extra on the Terraplane Six and $70 extra on the Terraplane Eight. The difference is due to the fact that the eight is regularly equipped with several of the items making up the de luxe equipment, such as the 6x16 tires.

Chester G. Abbott, general sales manager of Hudson Motor Car Company, states that, from the orders already received for the de luxe model, it is evident that these will be among the most popular of the Hudson and Essex line for the balance of this year.

ATLANTA'S POEM, "LOVER'S PRAYER," IS SET TO MUSIC

A poem by one of Atlanta's leading poets has been set to music and soon will be available in sheet form, according to announcement that Daniel Whitehead Hickey, winner of an annual award of the Poetry Society of America, has collaborated with Will Garway, noted composer, to produce "A Lover's Prayer." The publishers, Chappell-Harms, Inc., are confident that the song will be one of the most popular numbers of the season.

LAKEWOOD TO OFFER PUBLIC SHOW TODAY

A large crowd of Sunday amusement seekers are expected to gather at Lakewood park this afternoon to witness several acts which include songs, piano selections and an exhibition by an "escape artist." George M. Davis, Victor recording artist, and Lola Brown Shalton will furnish the musical entertainment and the "escape artist" is billed as Mr. Myers. The vaudeville acts will be open to the public free of charge and the midway attractions and riding devices will be open. More than 8,000 people visited the park last Sunday, park officials said.

Athens Mayor Rides in Ford V-8 Economy Car

At the left, A. G. Dudley, mayor of Athens, is shown entering the Ford V-8 economy car while Wesley Argo, driver, looks on. Mayor Dudley said he had heard so much about the new Ford V-8 that he desired to try one out and Argo kindly consented. He expressed his enthusiasm over this great little car in no few words. The Ford V-8 has reached the half-way mark of its 10,000-mile drive and, according to officials of the Wofford Oil Company, the average has been over 20 miles to the gallon.

Hudson-Essex Car Sales Continue High

Sales of Essex Terraplanes and Hudson cars are continuing at a high level, according to Chester G. Abbott, general sales manager. "We sold more automobiles during last week than we did during any week in the entire year of 1932 and, in fact, the same can be reported about the last five weeks. In other words, each of the last six weeks has exceeded in sales volume the best week we had in 1932, and so far there is every indication that the improvement will continue," Mr. Abbott said. "Our sales curve crossed that of last year during the week ending May 13, and for that week we were 4 per cent ahead of the same period of last year. During the week of July 1, as compared with last year, we were 144 per cent ahead; July 8, 204 per cent ahead, and July 15, 193 per cent better. It is also interesting to note that for the first half of July our sales ran about 10 per cent ahead of June, in spite of the fact that the July Fourth holiday intervened."

FREE SCHOLARSHIP OFFERED BY SCHOOL

A free scholarship in secretarial work is being offered to any young man or woman who has had at least a high school education by the Franklin Secretarial School, located in the Silvey building. A week of free instruction will be given to a selected group of applicants and the scholarship awarded to the one making the most progress during the week. Anyone having the educational requirement may make application to enter the contest. This application must be filed at the school during the week of August 21.

AIKENS TO ATTEND MEETING ON CODE

Johnny R. Aikens, president of the Independent Garage Owners' Association, is in Detroit to attend a meeting held by garage owners on the adoption of a national code under NRA. The meeting will be held at the Hotel Statler today and Monday. Mr. Aikens has been identified with the automobile industry for more than 20 years. One hundred garages or more are represented in the local organization, one of the best in the south.

Trial Date Set.

Economy

Almost At the Half-Way Mark

980 miles a day—that's the distance set for the "Silver Ford V-8" Economy Car to cover—and yet it is assaulting this distance to prove its economy of operation.

So far the trip has been wonderful. Since last Monday it has covered over 5,000 miles without one minute's delay on account of trouble with the car. Of course it stops when the oil is changed, and then only.

Meet it at your Ford dealer's place today—check with the driver and observe its mileage on gasoline and you will see immediately why the Ford V-8 is taking the country by storm.

Story of German Prison Camp Told in 'Captured' at Georgia

The heroes of the prison camps during the World War, the men whose daring and courage has gone, for the most part, unhonored and unsung while the more spectacular achievements of their comrades still in the trenches have been chronicled, these "forgotten men" of the international conflict come into their own in the special motion picture, "Captured," which is playing all this week at the Georgia theater.

Leslie Howard, Douglas Fairbanks Jr. and Paul Lukas share the leading honors in the story, the first two as two British army officers who have not seen each other since the days of their university friendship until they meet, as prisoners of war, in the bleak German prison camp behind the Hindenburg Line.

The love of these two men, comrades in both war and peace, for the same English girl, who is the wife of one though she is in love with the other, precipitates a crisis in the lives and fortunes of the hundreds of prisoners herded into the camp. This love triangle results in the most amazing, yet thoroughly credible series of events ever shown on the screen. It makes powerful drama, which, while in the main is a German prison camp, is not a war story, but a tale of heroic sacrifice for the sake of love.

Sir Philip Gibbs, famous British war correspondent who followed the titanic struggle during the four years of its continuance, was one of the few writers to memorialize with his pen, the prisoners of war. His novel, "Follow Prisoners," from which "Captured" was filmed, is almost unique in its vivid delineation of the trials and sufferings endured by the inmates of prison camps. This story, in serial form, has just completed its appearance in The Constitution.

'Three-Cornered Moon' Proves Joyous Farce at the Paramount

After seeing "Three Cornered Moon," which opened yesterday at the Paramount theater for a run of six days, you will want to pause to catch your breath and look up a few synonyms for hilarious, gay, frolicking, joyous, diverting. Diverging, maybe, is a good word to apply to the characterization of Claudette Colbert, Richard Arlen and Mary Boland, who hand out a laugh when the grim reality of the depression catches up to them and brings them face to face with things for the first time.

Miss Colbert is charming and amusing. Arlen is exceptionally romantic in a straight role. Mary Boland, in the most undisciplined comedy role of the season, is the head of the family of Rimplegars (as nutty as their name) and is totally irresponsible from beginning to end. To her everything is "nice." And everytime she tries, in her silly way, to cheer up her brood with a "that's nice" and a cup of coffee, you laugh.

The brood includes Tom Brown, William Bakewell, and Wallace Ford, three amusing sons, one a college boy, one trying to be an actor, and the other being run ragged by a little riven played by Joan Marsh. Then, of course, there's Hardie Albright, as an indigent author who moves in to sponge off the Rimplegars and proves himself as "nutty" as any of them.

About the time, when everything is as madcap as can be imagined, along comes reality and snatches the family fortune. That means work, and if you think work is serious, see "Three-Cornered Moon" and be disillusioned, for this family makes work more hilarious than idleness.

Bob Hess plays a delightful organist called "Louisiana." The short feature program is composed of "Stoopnaccary," and "Passing the Buck," a Vitaphone musical comedy full of music and pretty girls, and, usual, interesting.

'Know Your Star's Voice' Contest To Be Conducted at Paramount

Movie Fans! How quick are your eyes... how keen are your ears? Could you identify 18 famous Paramount motion picture stars, if you only heard their voices and saw their backs or the rear of their heads?

If you can, you can win prizes and get autographed photos, by competing in The Constitution's "Know Your Star's Voice" contest which begins next week on the screen of the Paramount theater.

This contest was devised to help celebrate Paramount Week, to be observed September 3 to 9.

The Paramount Hollywood studios has produced three special reels, each of which contains views of six different stars, but with their backs or shoulders facing the camera! You won't see their faces, but you can hear them talk or sing. In the three reels there are 18 stars in all. Can you identify them correctly and write an interesting 25-word description of each? That's all there is to it!

The first reel in the series of three will be shown on the screen of the Paramount theater the week beginning August 26. The second and third reels will follow on successive weeks.

Each week you will be provided with an official entry blank. It contains blank lines on which you are to write the names of the mystery stars. When you have filled out the three weekly blanks, mail or bring them to the "Know Your Star's Voice" Editor of The Constitution.

Autographed photographs of the 18 stars will be sent each of the winners of the 13 prizes offered. These will be mailed directly to the winners from Hollywood. First prize is $5 in cash, second prize is $3 and third prize is $2. The next best ten entries will each receive a pass for two people good for one month at the Paramount theater.

Attractions in Atlanta's Leading Theaters

There could be no film feature more spectacular and truthful than the Jewel production of "Forgotten Men," which the American Legion, Atlanta Post No. 1, has brought to Atlanta for benefit show to aid their relief fund. This official film of the World War will be seen Sunday at the Rialto theater, between the hours of 2:30 and 6:30. The entire proceeds from the performance go to Atlanta Post No. 1.

An aggregate of 32 years of service in the World War is represented in the eight veterans of as many nationalities who explain the foreign sequences in this marvelous picture. All of these soldiers hold the highest military honors offered by their respective countries and all but the French veteran, who was attached to the French navy, were wounded at least once.

Heard in sound and seen in close-ups are Sergeant Andre Beaulieu, French submarine service; Sergeant Pierre Gayet, French infantry; Corporal Michael Donovan, Ireland, British infantry; Sergeant John MacD, Forbes, Scotland, British infantry; Captain Angelo Gilberti, Italy, infantry; Sergeant Major Al Handy, tank corps, A. E. F. Then one sees Lieutenant Gaston Laurysen, Belgian, infantry, and Walter H. Shellenberg, member of the crown prince's general staff.

Because "Forgotten Men" is an accurate record of the horror and brutality of war, it must stand as an indictment of the stupidity of war.

WOMAN'S CLUB TO RUN REGULAR FILM SHOWS

Friday is the opening day for the Atlanta Woman's Club auditorium as a regular feature film theater showing unusual first and second-run pictures with stage novelties at a uniform popular price at all times. The first feature is Morton Downey in "Lucky in Love."

The A. W. C. A. is under the management of the General Amusement Company, located at the Atlanta Woman's Club, 1144 Peachtree street. The A. W. C. A. has recently installed the most modern sound and projector equipment in the city of Atlanta.

There will be five shows daily from 1 o'clock to 11 o'clock, with the exception of Sunday.

Starting news from Hollywood. Greta Garbo has demanded John Gilbert as her leading man again. He will be the Garbo's leading man in "Queen Christina." Maybe Greta finds, after extensive research, that no one can make screen love like John. Maybe.

When Loew's Grand holds a picture for a second week, that is something else again. It means, without further investigation, that the theater did so close to capacity business on the first week that you couldn't tell the difference without an accountant. For this theater always has a list of big-time attractions waiting to be shown. In fact, it is not likely that any picture could rate a second week here except a Marie Dressler-Wallace Beery production. Such, of course, as "Tugboat Annie."

Big news impending at the Erlanger. Mr. Peruchi promises some red-hot announcements in the near future, pertaining to some delightful events with the most popular stock company to come to Atlanta for half a dozen years. In the meantime, crowds continue to grow. More power to you, Peruchians!

There is a picture coming to town that I want you and you and everyone to see. That's the kind of picture it is. It makes you feel it a duty to impel everyone to see it. So they can share your enjoyment. It is "Lady for a Day" and if it doesn't bring laughter—and tears—your heart is atrophied and your emotions are decadent, that's all.

In the meantime, there are two benefit performances this afternoon. One, of "Forgotten Men," an official film record of the World War, at the Rialto, is a benefit for the local American Legion post. The other, "The Big Broadcast," at the Paramount, is a benefit for the 122d infantry. Seems these army men should get together.

Earl Holden, of the Georgia, has been honored by being chosen as the first manager to prepare an exploitation campaign with practical application to be sent all over the country under a new policy launched by Warner Brothers. The picture Earl will exploit is "Bureau of Missing Persons." A story about Earl and his new honor was carried in Variety in its issue of August 15.

I failed to get around last Thursday to the preview at the Paramount of "Pilgrimage." But Manager Whitaker, who is the most honest theater manager when it comes to appraising the value of his own attractions I ever knew, says it is a great piece of entertainment. "Another Cavalcade, in fact," is his opinion.

And there was no preview at Loew's Grand this week, owing to the holdover of "Tugboat Annie."

While the regular Rialto preview on Friday morning—of "Life in the Raw"—

'Tugboat Annie' Packs 'Em In For Second Week at the Grand

"Tugboat Annie" continues its way at Loew's Grand theater, ploughing through the past records of that theater's box-office as redoubtably as Annie's tug, the Narcissus, traversed the harbor of Seattle. No film in the history of this theater has attracted such attention and patronage, and its success caused Manager Melniker to announce a second week's run.

Everyone who, during the past several days, has enjoyed this film will realize the wisdom of this decision. "Tugboat Annie" is one of the year's fine pictures, presenting Marie Dressler and Wallace Beery in a pair of characterizations which equal the finest screen work of these sterling performers.

Miss Dressler is seen in the name part—as the principal operator of the Narcissus and wife of the usually tipsy Terry, Terry, the Narcissus, and her son—these are Annie's three loyalities. When her son, resenting Terry's drunken ways, tries to separate Annie and Terry, Annie refuses to leave her husband, and in consequence brings about a breach with the boy. Soon, too, the old Narcissus, worn out and its engines wheezy, has to be sold and is converted into a garbage boat. Annie, who could not leave her worthless husband, now cannot quit the Narcissus, and she and Terry remain in charge, towing garbage out to sea.

But eventually, at the film's thrilling climax, Annie and Terry, and the Narcissus redeem themselves, when, during a great storm, they rescue the palatial passenger ship of which their son is captain. How Terry is made a hero, and how the Narcissus, with new engines and a new coat of paint, begins its interrupted career as the best tug in the Seattle harbor, is told with extraordinary skill by the fine cast and the most resourceful director, Merryn LeRoy.

Rialto Has Zane Grey Picture And 'The Phantom Broadcast'

Zane Grey provides another of his popular western stories, and George O'Brien again plays the lead in his dashing, thrilling style, in "Life in the Raw," which is the attraction now showing at the Rialto theater. It is considered by most critics and audiences to mark a distinct advance in story for the clever author, combining his usual dramatic western plot style with an intensely powerful love story. Claire Trevor, a stage star newly come to the films, plays the feminine lead.

There is plenty of hard riding and quick shooting, staged before gorgeous scenes of the great southwest, but there is also a passionate romance that adds double interest to the picture. It was directed by Louis King and is one of the fastest moving action stories of recent months.

Following this attraction, Manager Murray has booked another sensational first-run picture for the latter half of the week, beginning Wednesday. This is "The Phantom Broadcast," with Ralph Forbes and Vivienne Osborne in the principal characters. It is a melodramatic story concerning a big radio studio and the efforts of a racketeer to "muscle in" on the earnings of an intensely popular crooner. Unknown to the racketeer, however, as well as to the general public, there is a secret connected with this singer and his manager that causes a remarkable plot situation. It is intense, thrilling and surprising, with a mystery that remains a mystery almost to the very end of the picture. Exceptional entertainment of a type new to nearly all screen fans.

Manager Murray has announced two forthcoming attractions at his house that have aroused appreciative comment all over the city.

On Saturday next he will begin a week's run of "Forgotten Men." This picture is the sensation of the bigger cities of the east, but will have its southern premiere at the Rialto next Sunday. It includes the official pictures of actual fighting in the World War taken by the army cameramen of 14 of the fighting nations. They are said to be the most startling of all the authentic war pictures yet released.

There is a fascinating running comment through the picture and a punch at the end, which brings us to the present day, that will never be forgotten by all who see it.

Following this attraction will come "Lady for a Day," the big sensation of the new picture season. This feature, honored with four stars in Liberty magazine and acclaimed as the greatest yet made by all who have seen it, opens an entirely original line of story for the screen, one that combines laughter with tears and arouses the sympathy of all who see it. Its fine cast includes Max Robson, Warren William, Guy Kibbee, Ned Sparks, Jean Parker and a host of other stars.

'Just Married,' Hilarious Comedy Is Offering of Peruchi Players

A riotous farce that ran for two years on Broadway will be the presentation by the Peruchi Players at the Erlanger theater this week. It is "Just Married," written by Anne Nichols, author of "Abie's Irish Rose," in collaboration with Adelaide Matthews, who wrote "Scrambled Wives," "Nightie Night" and other successes.

The Peruchi Players give "Just Married," an elaborate production, with the scenes, laid on a transatlantic liner, produced with utmost attention to detail. It is just the type of snappy, fast-moving comedy in which Atlanta's most successful stock company revels, and an evening of grins, chuckles and laughs galore is assured all who visit the Erlanger during the week.

"Just Married" ran for two solid years in New York; it was shown for six months in Chicago; it holds the record for comedies with a run of five months in Boston, the longest engagement ever known in the Hub for farcical plays; and it played four months in Philadelphia.

"Just Married" tells the story of a group of people homeward bound for America on the French liner Lafayette. As the ship is about to sail from Bordeaux, the passenger list is

NEWS OF STAGE AND SCREEN

Samuel Goldwyn Likes His Beauty Young and Sweet

By MOLLY MERRICK.
(Copyright, 1934, by the North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc.)

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Aug. 19.—A was once said that a girl had to be young to please Ziegfeld but far, far younger to please Sam Goldwyn.

"Why," he explained, "for Sam they have to be so tender that the meat will slip right off the bones."

I couldn't help thinking of this silly story when I looked at the Goldwyn girls over. The meat is ready to slip right off the bones, all right. "What three qualifications do you demand?" I asked the clever producer for Sam Goldwyn hits the bullseye nine times out of 10, a very high average for a picture producer and one practically unequalled in the colony.

"They must be young, fresh and sweet," was his reply. "Beautiful!" I said. "There's a lot of beautiful material I don't want. I don't want Broadway toughies or Hollywood softies. Manhattan showgirls are too skilled in showing themselves off—they take on a professional flair. And dolls from the casting office are too banal for pretty much the same reason."

Candidates came for the Goldwyn girls in droves from all parts of the compass. They do this every year. Hard-boiled chorus girls looked genuinely perplexed when told they were "too physical." And a pretty little cutie from Grand Rapids was shocked when the casting director told her she looked just like another Hollywood blonde. Some were passed by because they looked "too athletic"—some because they appeared to be "too lazy"—some because they were "too wise." But some others were chosen and I'll tell you about a few of them:

Some Winners. Dorothy Stevens, who was intercollegiate golf champion of the north-west, was chosen with her red eyes. Her home used to be in Portland but she's in the movies now. I don't know that the color of her eyes would matter at all in the films but it motivated in her favor in the choosing.

From Clarksville, Tenn., came Helen Wood, "Miss Personality," to represent Tennessee in Alabama and Kentucky in Hollywood. Goldwyn doubts if she'll ever go south again after seeing her screen test.

Myra Brennan, from south of the Mason-Dixon line, to be exact, from Montgomery, Ala., hitch-hiked her way over here when her family got her a job in a salve factory.

Brother and Sister

Mildred and Gordon Peters, two of the most popular members of the Peruchi Players, stock company at the Erlanger theater, are sister and brother. Instead of man and wife, as some patrons have believed. Mr. Peters is producer for the company, as well as playing juvenile leads, while Miss Peters is equally at home in ingenue and lead roles.

in the raw" was another that the pressure of work kept me from seeing. Howdy-do, Miss Nira!

Diary of a Pre-Viewer.

TUESDAY—I went to the Georgia to see "Captured." It is almost a great picture. It just misses because of some rather uninspired directing, but it succeeds fully in being tip-top entertainment. Not exactly a war story, but enacted in war times, with its scenes a German prison camp for British officers back of the lines in France. Leslie Howard, Doug Fairbanks Jr. and Paul Lukas the principal players. With Margaret Lindsay, whom you remember as the girl who went down on the "Titanic" in "Cavalcade"—as the girl interest. Written by Philip Gibbs the story is, of a surety, powerful. Also original with a twist that holds you entranced to the end.

WEDNESDAY—At the Fox I saw "No Marriage Ties" with Richard Dix, Doris Kenyon, etc. The opening of this story rather injured it for a newspaperman by its absurd impossibility. Imagine a Metropolitan newspaper holding up its street edition because a sports feature writer is drunk in a speakeasy! The story is interesting, to a point. It is somewhat of an attack on unscrupulous advertising—advertising that drives people to buy worthless products through fear. And I expect there is good cause for some such crusade. But the dialogue writer injures the picture's value by putting the lines into the mouths of his characters that would be grounds for acquittal in any court if you should kill a real life perpetrator.

WEDNESDAY—(Again! Does that man NEVER rest!) This time to see "Lady for a Day" at the Columbia projection room on Film Row. Ah, my friends, here is a picture. Believe it or not, they don't use the regular screen plot at all, at all, at all. They went out and bought a really new story from Damon Runyon. Then they found a real directing genius, Frank Capra. They chose May Robson, the grand old actress, for the central role of "Apple Annie." They picked Warren William for the big-time gambler and Ned Sparks as his lieutenant. Guy Kibbee as the pool shark. Adorable Jean Parker for the girl. Nat Pendleton, Hubert Bosworth, Halliwell Hobbes, Walter Connolly, Barry Norton, Glenda Farrell, etc., etc., for other roles. They took these ingredients of story, director and cast and made of them a picture so great in its humanness, its understanding and its sympathy that you can never forget it after once seeing it. Above all, May Robson is superb. She is a candidate for greatest actress who may see her in "Lady for a Day."

increased by a young man somewhat the worse for a wedding dinner, or more accurately, the accompanying drinks. By mistake he is assigned to share the stateroom of a pretty girl who is aboard with her chaperons and fiancé. In order to accomplish the desired ending, a young French woman is incorporated into the plot, and she appears in time to claim the affections as well as relations have been compromised. Notice to the fun that this fast-moving farce provides. Mildred Peters, Gerald Rowan, Mrs. Peruchi, Robert Stewart, Gordon Peters, John G. Rae, Klock Ryder, Betty Crandall and other members of the cast have excellent roles in the production.

Manager C. D. Peruchi continues the low admission rates which he has been in force all summer, despite the near approach of the regular season. Ladies are admitted free on Monday nights when accompanied by escort with paid ticket. Reservations may be made any day for all night performances. The bargain matinees, on Saturday and Wednesday, at 2:15, are not reserved.

Walter Sheats' orchestra and singers will again be in the pit to provide amusement before each show and between acts, with another vocal surprise for patrons on Monday night. The Peruchi Players, now in their thirteenth week, have achieved a remarkable record at the Erlanger. They have enjoyed excellent business from the start, with a steady increase in box office receipts until nowadays there are capacity crowds for many of the performances each week. They have undoubtedly "clicked," and evidently may remain here as long as they wish.

Neighborhood Theaters

'International House' Billed at Buckhead

The Buckhead theater, the popular suburban house which so many Atlantans are patronizing this year, announces for this week a program of four splendid features, together with comedies, cartoons, etc., to round out each program.

A special booking has been secured for Thursday and Friday in "International House," a picture that is just about the most gorgeous, funniest, craziest and cleverest film of the year. It is purest farce, filled with side-splitting gags, great songs and ensembles of scrumptious girls. It boasts a cast including W. C. Fields, Peggy Hopkins Joyce, Stuart Erwin, George Burns and Gracie Allen, Rudy Vallee, Colonel Stoopnagle and Bud, and many, many other stars of stage, screen and radio.

On Monday and Tuesday the Buckhead will show "The Face in the Sky," with Spencer Tracy and Marian Nixon. This is the story of the romance of an itinerant sign-painter and a little country girl who wants to become a city lady. It is funny and romantic, and is in all respects fine entertainment.

On Wednesday the attraction will be "Scarlet River," with Tom Keene. This is a highly original picture that, while burlesquing the average "western," yet retains all the features that make westerns such popular films.

Saturday brings to the Buckhead "Elmer the Great," with Joe E. Brown as the hall player who knew he was the greatest in the world. With its story of Ring Lardner and with the big-mouth comedian giving one of his finest performances, it just has to be good.

DeKalb To Present 'International House'

'International House' opens the week at the DeKalb Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday for a three-day run and inaugurates a new policy of playing outstanding pictures the first three days of each week. Celebrated stars of the stage, screen and radio combine their talents to make this one of the outstanding pictures of the year. While they offer varied entertainment, the plot is so constructed that a continuous story is presented.

Comedy, romance and music is furnished by W. C. Fields, Burns and Allen, Colonel Stoopnagle and Bud, Stuart Erwin, Peggy Hopkins Joyce, Sari Maritza, George Burns and Gracie Allen, Rudy Vallee, Cab Calloway, Baby Rose Marie and the Girls in Cellophane. "International House" is to comedy what "Grand Hotel" is to drama.

A gang leader who buys grand opera and symphony records, spends thousands of dollars for fur coats and cubist paintings, stunts himself in high-brow literature and attends lectures on technocracy—all to fit himself for a place in society with a capital S, is the amusing character in "Little Giant," starring Robinson and "The Little Giant" Thursday and Friday. He is supported by Mary Astor, Helen Vinson and Russell Hopton.

Saturday, Ken Maynard slings his spurs and fights fiercely for the girl he loves in "Fargo Express."

Empire Starts Week With 'Me and My Gal'

Comedy, romance, action and drama seek across the Empire theater screen this week, and patrons of Manager Alpha Fowler's Georgia avenue playhouse have an extraordinary line of screen tests to look forward to. "Me and My Gal," comedy-romance with Joan Bennett and Spencer Tracy, will be the offering for Monday and Tuesday. Tracy enacts the role of a freckle-faced, red-headed, car detective.

Wednesday's feature will be "The Kiss Before the Mirror," with Nancy Carroll, Frank Moran, Paul Lukas and Gloria Stuart. Two husbands, two wives and two loves—a double triangle of screen drama unlike anything ever seen before at the Empire. An old favorite, Conway Tearle, with Myrna Loy, Barbara Kent and Walter Byron, are to be seen on Thursday in "Vanity Fair," an ultra-modern version of Thackeray's famous novel.

Framed into fame and then dizzied by a dame, Leo Carillo, with Dickie Moore, Nat Pendleton and Thelma Todd, will be shown in "Deception," while Tom Mix and his famous pony, Tony, will be seen in "Hidden Gold" on Saturday.

West End To Present 'International House'

The nation's most riotous comedies are gathered in the current season's laughfest, "International House," which plays at West End theater Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. The story concerns a group of big business representatives assembled in a Chinese hotel to bid on a marvelous new invention. One of the largest all-star casts ever assembled for a motion picture plays in "International House," with Peggy Hopkins Joyce, W. C. Fields, Stuart Erwin, Rudy Vallee, George Burns and Gracie Allen, Cab Calloway and his orchestra and Bela Lugosi.

Thursday, Ralph Morgan, Boots Mallory, Alexander Kirkland and Irene Ware will be seen in "Humanity," a story that revolves around

At Community Houses

"International House," in many respects cleverest, funniest, craziest and most gorgeous extravaganza of the screen, has been booked for showings at five community theaters this week. It will be at the Tenth Street, Palace, West End and DeKalb on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday and at the Buckhead on Thursday and Friday. It boasts a remarkable list of stars, two of whom, Peggy Hopkins Joyce and W. C. Fields, are shown above.

War in Horrible Realism

"Forgotten Men," a collection of official motion pictures of actual fighting in the World War, will be the attraction at the Rialto theater beginning next Saturday and running for one week. In addition, it is showing this afternoon at the Rialto from 2:30 to 6:30 at a benefit performance of Atlanta Post No. 1 of the American Legion.

'The Sphinx,' Murder Mystery, Is Current Attraction at the Fox

Metropolitan life came into its own Saturday, in the "Sphinx," the mystery drama playing at the Fox theater for the first three days of this week. Speed and thrills were intermixed with suspense and realistic glimpses into police courts, newspaper offices and other hotbeds of city activity, while the audience was taken on a frantic hunt for a desperate criminal, and treated to a drama as exciting as it was true to life.

Stirring events begin to take place when the star reporter on a newspaper takes it upon himself to help the police run down a criminal who has killed four stock brokers in identical the same manner. Motivated by a desire to win the $5,000 reward offered, and thus be able to marry the girl he loves, the young man gets evidence against Jerome Breen, played by Lionel Atwill, a wealthy deaf mute. How the reporter pursues Breen, even after the latter has escaped conviction in his first trial, until he has helped to bring the real criminal to justice, supplies a thrilling plot it would be unfair to reveal here.

The acting throughout is excellent. Lionel Atwill adds new laurels to his long list of successes by his portrayal of the deaf mute in this story.

Completing the program, the Fox is offering a varied bill of short subjects, including a fine two-reel comedy, a cartoon, a travesty, and a descriptive reel, dealing with the

U. S. Gang Films Blamed For Threats in Paris

PARIS, Aug. 19.—(UP)—American gangster films were blamed by the police today for an epidemic of letters sent to wealthy men and women in Paris recently, threatening kidnapping unless large sums are deposited in secluded spots.

Most of the threats were written on school notebook papers, giving rise to a theory that school boys are responsible.

'Air Hostess' Billed At Poncey Two Days

Evalyn Knapp, James Murray and Thelma Todd are presented Monday and Tuesday at the Ponce de Leon theater in "Air Hostess." This thrilling spectacle of the air concerns a daring girl who found her lover while soaring through the heavens.

Wednesday, Helen Chandler and William Collier Jr. are offered in "Belching Jury Doors." It is easy for a man to be convicted for a crime he did not commit, but it is hard for one newspaper reporter to prove he is not guilty.

Thursday and Friday Mae Clarke is assisted by Ralph Bellamy in "The Parole Girl," a story of a young girl who was branded because of one man's mistake.

Saturday, Bill Boyd, Roscoe Ates and Dorothy Wilson are seen in "Lucky Devils." This is a story of the stunt men of the movies.

Tenth Street Plays 'International House'

The feature attraction at the Tenth Street theater Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday is "International House," a delightful comedy abounding with song hits and beautiful dance numbers. The remarkable cast boasts Peggy Hopkins Joyce, W. C. Fields, Rudy Vallee, Stuart Erwin, George Burns and Gracie Allen, Colonel Stoopnagle and Bud, and Cab Calloway and his orchestra, plus a gala array of other well-known stars.

Thursday and Friday Edward G. Robinson and Mary Astor will be seen in "The Little Giant." This is Robinson's first attempt in a comedy role, which he masters even better than his dramatic ones, in which he has gained such universal praise.

Saturday's attraction is also one that will make you laugh. It is none other than Spencer Tracy, Marion Nixon and Stuart Erwin in "The Face in the Sky."

Processing Chief Named for State

W. E. Page, United States internal revenue collector for Georgia, Saturday announced the appointment of Russell Griner, formerly head of the income tax department, as chief of the processing tax division. Frank B. Boyce Jr. will succeed Griner in the income tax division.

Experts from Washington will be in Atlanta August 23 and 24 to train the personnel in the process tax division which consists of the chief and seven deputies. All have been appointed and assigned to their duties.

Mr. Page said additional offices will be located throughout the state for handling the work. A tentative program calls for locating offices at Rome, LaGrange, Columbus and Augusta in addition to those already at Atlanta, Macon, Savannah and Thomasville.

AIR-WAY TO PUT ON BLUE EAGLE DRIVE

In support of the NRA employment drive, Manager N. R. Lippincott Jr. of the Air-Way branch of Atlanta announced that from Monday until Labor Day, a blue eagle campaign would be conducted and that lowest down payments and lowest term payment plans in the history of the organization had been authorized for that period.

Mr. Lippincott directs the Air-Way sales organization in this territory in merchandising an electric cleaner.

Atlanta Boy Scouts Enjoy Visits In London, Belgium and Holland

Editor's Note: The following article was written by The Constitution by Swain (Pinky) McCracken, of Atlanta, who is with the group of Atlanta Boy Scouts who attended the World Jamboree, near Budapest. The article was written while the Scouts were en route from Holland to Hungary.

By SWAIN (PINKY) MCCRACKEN. Arriving in London on the night of July 23 after two days of sightseeing by bus through rural England in the vicinity of the Shakespeare country, the Atlanta group of Boy Scouts en route to the World Jamboree near Budapest, Hungary, August 2-10, were taken to a comfortable hotel just two blocks from Buckingham Palace. Three days of intensive sightseeing followed.

Westminster Abbey was the most interesting place we visited, and most of the boys found time to return to the abbey another time in addition to our regular tour. The tombs and memorials of the war heroes and distinguished literary men and statesmen of English history were impressive and informative. We felt that the visit to the abbey was in itself ample compensation for the trip. Other places of particular interest were St. Paul's cathedral, Oxford University, House of Parliament, Hyde Park, Buckingham and Whitehall, London, Tower, Scotland Yard, the American embassy and the statue of Abraham Lincoln.

The thrill of the trip so far came when we saw the king and queen of England and the change of guard at Buckingham Palace. Most of the party obtained good snapshots of the royal car as it left the palace grounds not 10 feet from where we were standing. A large crowd gathered, but our guide had placed us in a good position with a number of other American Scouts we met in London, who were also bound for the jamboree. The brilliant uniforms of the royal guards almost eclipsed the red of our own neckerchiefs.

URSCHEL, FRIENDS PRACTICE SHOOTING TO DEFEND SELVES

OKLAHOMA CITY, Aug. 19.—(AP)—A new postime, target practice, has found its way into the day-by-day routine of Charles F. Urschel and his close associates.

The possibility of an attempt at reprisal by fringe men who have helped to arrest and charge with the kidnapping of the Oklahoma oil millionaire has brought about this attention to marksmanship.

Urschel and others close to him seldom are without pistols.

"We've brightened up our shooting eyes," said one friend of Urschel. "I don't expect a trouble of this sort, but if it comes I'll try mighty hard to get in one lick myself."

When at their desks, trying to pick up the threads of a large oil business that has been in the hands of sub-executives for nearly a month, pistols are laid handy, beneath a sheet of paper, in a top drawer or elsewhere within instant reach.

LIDA NASH PLEASED WITH BUYING RESULTS

Lida Nash Montague, better known to the world of art and decoration as Lida Nash, has been in New York for the past two weeks buying home furnishings and decorations for Rich's, where she holds the post of interior decorator.

Her letters regarding the things she is seeing and purchasing are enthusiastic. She writes of color and lines and she hardly waits to return to Atlanta to demonstrate the newest and smartest ideas for homes that combine beauty and livability.

Fashions in home decoration change as rapidly as fashions in clothes," writes Mrs. Montague, "and the home that is up-to-the-minute must keep abreast of them. Never was there so beautiful, so inspiring to work with, my head is fairly whirling with ideas for attaining beauty in homes—whether simple or elaborate."

Mrs. Montague will return from New York tonight and will be in her shop on Rich's fourth floor on Monday morning.

Scenes Taken on Recent Ford Vacation Trip

Ford buyers who were given free trips to Detroit and Chicago with every purchase of a new car delivered in Detroit had the time of their lives on the trip. At the upper right is shown part of the Rouge plant, visited by the buyers. Below the vacationists are shown arriving on two special trains, and below it are the 221 cars taken out of Detroit by the visitors. At the bottom the vacationists are shown inspecting operations in the Rouge plant. After being entertained by Ford officials, the buyers left in their cars for Chicago, where they saw the fair. In addition to their transportation, the purchasers were given money for expenses. Included in the trip was a stopover in Cincinnati. Three hundred and fifty persons made the trip from Atlanta, and all expressed themselves as delighted with their treatment. All expenses were included in the regular price of a new Ford car. The trips were given to Georgians. While at Dearborn the visitors were guests of Ford officials at the Dearborn Inn.

RITES TO BE HELD HERE FOR CLAUDE SIMS SR.

Funeral services for Claude E. Sims Sr., of Jacksonville, Fla., who was drowned on a fishing trip in Florida Friday, will be held at 2 o'clock this afternoon at Spring Hill. Dr. Ellis A. Fuller and the Rev. Len G. Broughton will officiate and interment will be in the Sims cemetery on West Peach Ferry road.

Mr. Sims, president of the Sims Tire Company in Jacksonville, was a brother of Walter A. Sims, state senator and a former mayor of Atlanta. He and a companion, Bill Johnson, of Jacksonville, were drowned when their boat overturned in a stream between Jacksonville and St. Augustine. In addition to his brother, he is survived by his mother, Mrs. S. C. Sims; his wife, a son, two daughters and three other brothers and three sisters.

ious information on the subject is already at hand. It is axiomatic that the lowest rate, with reasonable service, will get most of the business offered and all the questionnaires that might be sent out between now and Christmas will not alter that fundamental fact.

Hedged around with restrictions and heavily taxed, the railroads have been unable to get fairly started in the competition against other types of transportation now largely without either regulation or taxation.

No man in the United States is more familiar with the problems of transportation than Co-ordinator Eastman, who served for many years as head of the interstate commerce commission. He is fully qualified both by ability and experience for the arduous task of devising a plan by which the transportation systems of the country can be put on a sound and healthfully-competitive basis.

MAKING THE FARM PAY.

How a 1,200-acre Georgia farm was turned from a liability into an asset through the medium of up-to-date farming is told in an interview, appearing on the opposite page, with Mrs. Louis D. Bolton, of Burge plantation, in Newton county.

"We supplied ourselves with all the essential household needs and our tenants did the same thing," says Mrs. Bolton, and from that starting point proceeded with a program of diversified production, with enough land in cotton to produce a hundred bales of cotton as the chief cash crop.

Mrs. Bolton warns that successful farming cannot be accomplished by distant management. Although born and reared on the plantation she now manages, she has for many years lived in Detroit as the wife of a well-known businessman of that city.

But Burge plantation, operated from Detroit, became an expensive liability, so Mrs. Bolton came to Georgia to see if it could be profitably conducted by "on-the-ground" management. The result has been an annual profit large enough to represent a worth-while return from both her efforts and her investment.

What Mrs. Bolton has successfully accomplished can be achieved on every farm in Georgia by the application of up-to-date and businesslike methods.

A comfortable living and a fair cash return can be wrested from the soil of Georgia by every farmer who will adopt the live-at-home plan of farming, giving precedence to the production of the food, both vegetable and animal, needed for his family and his labor.

The farmers in agricultural regions far less favored by nature than those of Georgia are more prosperous, because they have kept step in their farming operations with the progress of the times.

There would have been fewer farm foreclosures and less abandoned farms in Georgia during the past four years if the sound and businesslike methods of farming followed by Mrs. Bolton in turning her ancestral acres from a liability into an asset had been more generally followed.

THE CHILDREN AT THE FAIR.

There are lots of free seats provided for the tired visitors to stop and rest at the Century of Progress Exposition in Chicago. Mothers who are preparing to take their children with them to Chicago on August 22 to participate in Georgia Day festivities will be able to head off the cry of the footsore and weary child. There are plenty of places to take "junior" when he goes to sit down, and the same holds good if "sissy" pleads to be carried in arms because she is too tired to walk.

Upon entering the grounds at the Twelfth street gate, there are seats for more than 100 persons at the plaza fountain. The Sears-Roebuck building has an open-air terrace overlooking the lagoon, where chairs can accommodate 1,000 persons, who may view the lagoon and the exposition buildings from a most attractive vantage point.

In the lounge and on the veranda of the Illinois host building, there are places for 200 to sit and meditate. At the end of the Avenue of Flags is the Hall of Science, and within its court and on the second ramp more than 100 can be seated on benches. On the east side of the A. and P. pavilion, 400 chairs will accommodate the tired sightseer. Gaily-colored benches for 2,000 people are on the west side of the pavilion and a free show goes on continuously at one or the other place.

On the Chrysler reservation there are 1,000 chairs and benches placed along the walks, around the fountains, in the gardens and in the salon on the second floor of the building. Benches for 200 are placed in the garden of the General Motors grounds and there are chairs on the open air terraces to tempt the passerby.

Benches for 7,000 people line the paths, streets and courtways, and benches surround the Electrical building and its court. Ohio and some of the other states have provided seats in the exhibits, and benches are plentiful in the Court of States at the Federal building. Every seat is free to the exposition visitor and Georgians will find that the comfortably-cushioned chairs, upholstered in striped canvas, will prove a delightful rendezvous.

By all means, take "junior" and "sissy" to the fair. Every provision for their comfort has been arranged. Let's take the children to the exposition and give them an experience they will never forget.

GOOD NEWS FOR HOME OWNERS.

Announcement that the Prudential Insurance Company and the Bank of America have agreed to accept the bonds of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation in exchange for the mortgages they hold on distressed home property should have a helpful effect in convincing all such mortgage holders of the wisdom of accepting these bonds.

These two great institutions would not have taken the action they have without full confidence in the soundness of the bonds as a revenue-producing asset and that on maturity their face value will be paid in full.

Other great insurance companies, banks and loan corporations have previously put their stamp of approval on the bonds after full investigation of their value. With such proof of the soundness of this governmental security mortgagees who refuse to accept them hereafter will subject themselves to charges of either unfortunate timidity in co-operating with one of the finest of the federal relief efforts, or of a desire to take unfair advantage of the home owners whose mortgages they hold.

Not only does President Duffield, of the Prudential, agree to accept the bonds when they represent the full value of the mortgage, but, in the desire to co-operate to the fullest extent possible, agrees to discuss the acceptance of a lesser amount when the present appraised value shows that the property in question is not worth the full value of the loan upon it.

That should be the attitude of every mortgagee in the country. Its general acceptance would not only mean relief for hundreds of thousands of distressed home owners but would have a definitely beneficial effect on conditions generally.

AN OVERLOOKED OPPORTUNITY.

A statement issued by the federal bureau of foreign and domestic commerce, citing the rapid increase in the amount of tung oil being imported into the United States from China, calls attention to the large revenue being lost to this section as the result of our failure to take advantage of the opportunity to produce this type of vegetable oil.

Tung oil, extracted from the seed of a tree growing in the southern sections of China, has been used in that country for centuries for caulking boats, as an ingredient for leather dressing, in the manufacture of soap and for waterproofing purposes.

During the past half century, however, its use has become worldwide as a quick-drying oil for varnishes and paints, in the manufacture of linoleum and in the printing industry. Its use has been expanded steadily for other purposes until now it is one of the leading export products of world trade.

Since 1900 intensive efforts have been made to grow the tung trees in every country in the world, fruit plantings in the United States having been made in southern California. The climate of that section proved to be unsuitable, but the fact was established that the trees can be grown to advantage in the territory stretching a hundred miles inland from the Gulf of Mexico, from Texas to Florida.

The United States is by far the largest user of tung oil, there having been imported into this country in 1930 nearly 900,000 piculs (133 pounds) of the total world production that year of 1,167,000 piculs. The imports for the first five months of this year amounted to 56,000,000 pounds as against 48,000,000 for the same period last year. Selling for as high as 15 cents a pound in 1928, the price has dropped, under the influence of the depression to 7 1/2 cents. At a normal price of 10 or 12 cents the amount now consumed in the United States would cost approximately $15,000,000.

Only a few tung orchards are now in operation in this country and they have demonstrated that a better grade of oil can be produced in this country than that now being received from China and that it is entirely possible to produce in the south whatever quantity is required by American industry.

All of south Georgia, from Tifton to the Florida line, is ideal both as to soil and climate for the production of this oil, according to federal experts who have conducted extensive experiments in that section.

This oil, the use of which is rapidly expanding, offers wide possibilities for increased revenue for the Gulf states and for the development of land not suited for the production of other crops. Its advantages as a product are outlined in excerpts appearing on the opposite page, from a booklet prepared by C. C. Concannon, chief of the chemical division of the federal department of commerce.

The development of this new and exclusive industry should be encouraged not only by the state governments of this section but by business and financial interests as well.

A GEORGIA GENIUS.

The work of a genius is present in the graphic presentation of scenes in the days of the old south in a full page reproduction in today's grave section of paintings by Wilbur G. Kurtz, Atlanta artist. They lose, of course, the marvelous color effect of the originals which are worthy of a place in any art museum in the country. Something about Mr. Kurtz and his work appears on the opposite page.

In addition to being an artist of outstanding ability, Mr. Kurtz has for years been an intense student of southern history, with special bearing on the Civil War period. Of the movements of the two armies around Atlanta, and throughout Georgia, he knows probably more than any other living person.

Many of Mr. Kurtz's pen and ink drawings have been reproduced in The Constitution, his sketches of instances incident to the capture and burning of Atlanta having attracted national attention.

Rarely have the finest qualities of the artist and the student been so combined as they are in Mr. Kurtz. An artist of rare ability, he portrays graphically and forcefully with his pen the stories and incidents depicted in his masterly paintings.

Although a comparatively young man, Mr. Kurtz has produced a large volume of paintings which will be a permanent record of the almost forgotten scenes and conditions of the old time south.

NEW AID FOR THE DEAF.

Science in its endless search for discoveries to benefit the human race has, according to reports from New York, gained a new conquest in relief for the afflicted by going contrary to the provisions of nature. Persons who have lost as much as 90 per cent of their hearing will hear sounds clearly and distinctly, it is claimed, by a new instrument that shoots the sound vibrations not to the eardrum but directly through the bones of the head to the nerves of hearing that are incased deep in the skull.

The new invention, which is being perfected by the engineers of the Dictograph Company, is no larger than a quarter and is clamped inconspicuously on the bone back of the lobe of the external ear.

The principle of the new "acousticon" system of hearing is simple. In place of nature's use of the eardrum, the skull is used to convey sounds through the nerve system to the brain. It is claimed that those hard of hearing can, by the use of the new instrument, hear sounds, without distortion, practically as well as those of normal hearing.

It is estimated that there are 10,000,000 people with defective hearing in the United States, a large per cent being so badly afflicted as to be handicapped to a marked degree in the pursuit of their daily activities. To such persons, the new invention will prove a wonderful boon should it live up to the predictions of its proponents.

Things are returning to normal. They are beginning to hire people who are prominent in the news for vaudeville appearances.

The only reason there aren't new forms of taxes is because the law-making bodies haven't had time to think them up.

Grass may grow in city streets, but it is a certainty that none is growing under President Roosevelt's feet.

Maybe there are worse things than a summer cold, but we are unable to name them just now.

Things are not quite normal. There aren't as many slogans as formerly.

THE WORLD'S WINDOW

The Tinkle Of the Troika Bells.

Among the white Russian émigrés in Paris, counts, princes, boyars, another wave of nostalgia is coming up. Following Prince Mirsky's return to Moscow and the book he has written about the new Russia, many other aristocrats are stirred by longings to see back their native skies and the scenes familiar to their childhood. I know some of those Russians. One of them was telling me recently that he had lost all ambition and joy of life and that he was obsessed with thoughts of Russia. "I do nothing but dream of Tula and Moscow and buildings with Greek cupolas and at nights I can hear not abuse—whisky.

"He wonders how many parents wish their children brought to use whisky? Whisky, which contains alcohol, a habit-forming poison with a special affinity for the brain; whisky which creates an appetite it never satisfies. It is the only thing I suggest as a national attempt to make Christmas a fete day for the saloons, Rev. Dr. John Thompson, famous pastor of the Episcopal Chicago Temple, in the Loop, made a reply to Colonel Reeves, which we quote:

"Your appeal to the Crusaders to adopt the national slogan, 'Out of the Saloons by Christmas,' is a good one. It comes into my hands. This whisky is never was a prohibitionist until I saw the advantage of it. In city missionary work, of which I have been superintendent for many years, I have seen foreign language hotels which were little hells completely transformed, and I have seen homes by the hundreds where there were no pictures, no mirrors, no glass in the walls, no tablecloths on the table, completely renovated with standards of comfort, such as human beings ought to enjoy, established also as a fruit of the crusade."

"I have heard young women, not to speak of young men, give testimony that they never saw either father or never had it. On Christmas Day, nor ever had the Christians present when it was a child; that no such thing as Christmas present was ever in their home until after prohibition. You evidently want the return of a drunken Christmas, the day on which we commemorate the birth of the Savior, and when it blackened by the return of liquor.

Dr. Thompson continued: "No nation can drink itself back to prosperity in a moral universe with a moral God on the throne of that universe. You want it to be a drunken Christmas."

"The liquor interests have millions of dollars to spend in their efforts. They never did respect either manhood, womanhood and childhood and now they want to regulate manhood. But evils should not be regulated. They should be stamped out. Nearly every other method has been tried and failed. I am not going to remedy," he reminds, and adds: "Moral ideals take hold very slowly. Mechanical ideals very quickly. I am not going to regulate manhood, womanhood and that God is on the throne that the evil liquor traffic will ultimately be finally prohibited. And God will have the last word to say on this matter."

With these statements the W. C. T. U. agrees, plans and works. The W. C. T. U. will quit when the liquor traffic quits—and not till then. The liquor traffic has organized around the world to combat educational and legal moves against the consumption of liquor. Why should the W. C. T. U. or the church retire from any fight against any evil?

Miss Burt To Wed Raymond L. Smith At Sept. Ceremony

Of cordial interest to a wide circle of friends are the plans for the wedding of Miss Mabel Burt and Raymond L. Smith. The marriage will be solemnized at the Park Street Methodist church on Sunday afternoon, September 3, at 3:30 o'clock. The ceremony will be performed by Rev. J. H. Barton and Miss Burt will be given in marriage by her father, Arthur L. Burt. Her only attendant will be her sister, Mrs. B. M. Cross, and John Matthews will serve as best man. Music will be rendered by Mrs. E. M. Aiken, organist, and Miss Janie Hunter, violinist. Appropriate selections will be sung by Mrs. D. C. Starnes and Mrs. William B. Tucker. Following the ceremony an informal reception will be held at the home of the bride's parents at 562 Langhorn street. The bride and bridegroom will leave immediately for Chicago, where they will make their home.

Miss Burt is being entertained at a series of parties. A tea complementing several brides-elect of the Ark Amicus class of which Miss Burt is a member, was given at the Wren's Nest on Saturday afternoon. On August 5 the bride-elect was guest of honor at an informal luncheon at the home of Mrs. W. J. Mathias on Pace's Ferry road. The Viola Aiken circle of Park Street church honored Miss Burt with a surprise shower on August 9 at the home of Mrs. Lovick Williamson in West End.

On August 10 the bride-elect was given a surprise shower of miscellaneous gifts by the following members of the D. D. D. Club: Misses Martha Dailey, Cora Lou Reeves, Daisy McColl, Ruth Moody, Irene Terrell, Elizabeth Jackson, Dodge Granger, Janie Hunter and Mrs. Charles P. Cox. Miss Elizabeth Jackson and Miss Irene Terrell entertained on Saturday at a shower complementing the bride-elect. The guests included Misses Janie Hunter, Alice Mae Massengale, Laila Bernard, Alva Burks, Louise Thigpen, Pauline Allen, Martha Dailey, Velma Mitchell, Bessie Curran, Lucy Norris, Louise Powell, Mattie Lou Rosser, Mesdames Joe Parris, Clara Fagal, C. T. Tolbert, F. M. Weston, B. M. Cross, Pat Stevens, Earle Hollingsworth, W. J. Mathias, W. P. Russell, J. C. Kirkland, John Scheer, Edgar Orr, William Midkiff, Cliff Chesnut, A. L. Burt, Thomas Jackson, L. H. Smith. On August 19 Miss Dorothy Mulkey was hostess at a linen shower honoring Miss Burt.

Miss Kelley Weds Charles D. Worthen

Miss Ella Kelley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Lawrence Kelley, became the bride of Charles D. Worthen at a quiet ceremony taking place Saturday at the Gordon Street Presbyterian church. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Harold Shields, pastor of the church, in the presence of immediate families and close friends. Dark blue triple sheer fashioned the bride's wedding ensemble, the dress featuring the popular full sleeves and simple lines. She wore harmonizing accessories and a shoulder bouquet of sweetheart roses and lilies of the valley. Mr. Worthen and his bride left for a wedding trip to New York city and upon their return will reside on Atlanta place.

Miss Marion Corrigan To Wed Dr. Henry Carr at Early Date

MISS MARION CORRIGAN.

Of wide social interest is the announcement made today by Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Michael Corrigan Sr., of the engagement of their daughter, Miss Marion Camilla Corrigan, to Dr. Henry Carr, of Milledgeville, Ga., the marriage to take place at an early date. The lovely bride-elect and her fiancé are representatives of prominent Georgia families, members of which were outstanding in the early development of the south.

Miss Corrigan is the only daughter of Joseph M. Corrigan Jr., of Meridian, Miss., Robert, Victor, Frank, Louis and George Corrigan, of this city. The bride-elect's maternal grandparents were the late Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Otis, of Augusta, Ga., and her paternal grandparents were the late Mr. and Mrs. Michael Corrigan, of Atlanta. Miss Corrigan's mother was before her marriage Miss Angela Otis. Miss Mamie Corrigan, of New York, and Robert R. Otis, of Atlanta, are the bride-elect's aunt and uncle.

SHINN—MOSLEY.

Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Beck, of Bowdon, announce the engagement of their sister, Mildred Shinn, to L. H. Mosley, of Charlotte, N. C., formerly of Carrollton, the date of the marriage to be announced later.

Announcement Made of Marriage Of Miss Aycock and Ernest Camp Jr.

MONROE, Ga., Aug. 19.—Interest of many friends in Georgia and other states attend the announcement of the marriage of Miss Willie Mae Aycock and Ernest Camp Jr., of Monroe.

The bride is the only child of Mr. and Mrs. T. Clarence Aycock, of Monroe and Sparta. She is a graduate of Lucy Cobb Institute in Athens.

Mr. Camp is the son of Ernest Camp, editor and publisher of the Walton Tribune, and the late Mrs. Camp, being widely known through his activities as newspaper editor, advertising man and magazine writer. He was graduated from the University of Georgia in 1927 with highest honors, receiving the degree of bachelor of arts in journalism. Membership in Phi Beta Kappa, Phi Kappa Phi, the Sphinx Club, Gridiron Club and other bodies was conferred upon him in recognition of attainments in scholarship and student activities. He is a member of the Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity.

For a year he served the southern division office of the Associated Press in Atlanta, after which he was for a year associate editor of the Walton Tribune, going thence to New York city in January, 1930, to enter the advertising business with the former Charles C. Green Advertising Agency. At the same time he conducted a newspaper column, "Main Street Looks at Broadway," which was distributed weekly by a syndicate to more than 2,000 newspapers.

In January, 1931, he moved to Syracuse, N. Y., to accept the position of assistant advertising manager of The Lamson Company, Inc., and in September of the same year he returned to the south, where he has been making his home in Monroe.

For several years he has been a contributor to the American Press, a trade journal published in New York for newspaper editors and publishers, as well as for other business publications and newspapers. Following a brief vacation trip this week Mr. and Mrs. Camp will make their home in Monroe at the Aycock residence on West Spring street.

Davidson—Dunbar.

The marriage of Mrs. Alemeda H. Davidson and Bruce N. Dunbar, of Philadelphia, Pa., was solemnized Saturday, August 12, at 5 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Walter C. Taylor on North Eleventh street in the presence of close friends. Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson were the attendants. The ceremony was performed by Dr. Witherpoon Dodge.

After a short trip to Florida Mr. and Mrs. Dunbar will be at home at 32 Huntington road.

Miss Smith To Wed James W. Anderson

Miss Elizabeth Smith, lovely young daughter of Rev. and Mrs. Horace S. Smith, of Decatur, will marry James William Anderson Jr., of Meridian, Miss., Thursday, September 21, an announcement which centers the interest of hosts of friends of the young couple throughout the south. The wedding will take place at the home of Rev. and Mrs. Smith on Ponce de Leon avenue, with Mr. Smith officiating.

Miss Smith is a charming young woman, a graduate of this year's class in Georgia State College for Women at Milledgeville. Her earlier education was received in Griffin. During her junior and senior years at G. S. C. W. she was assistant dietitian. She was secretary of the junior class and voted one of the outstanding students on the campus. Miss Smith's sisters are Mrs. Howard Burnett and Miss Claire Smith and H. S. Smith Jr. is her only brother.

Mr. Anderson, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Anderson, of Meridian, was graduated from Oglethorpe University three years ago. He is a Sigma Nu and a member of the three honor societies on the campus, Blue Key, Boar's Head and Lord's Club. He is manager of Dun & Bradstreet branch office in Meridian, where the young couple will live.

Miss Graham Weds H. M. Jackson.

Announcement is made today of the marriage of Miss Katherine Louise Graham and Hughie MacHenry Jackson, which was solemnized Saturday, July 29, at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Frances E. Graham, on North Highland avenue. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Louis B. Newton, in the presence of the immediate families.

The bride's Titian beauty was emphasized by her bridal gown of white point d'esprit over white tulle, with floor-fitting bodice and tucked floor-length skirt. She carried a bouquet of roses, swainsons and valley lilies.

Mrs. John Cecil Tappan was her sister's only attendant. She wore a gown of yellow mousseline de soie and carried a bouquet of flowers in pastel shades.

Mr. Jackson is the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Jackson Sr. He graduated from Georgia School of Technology with the 1933 class. He is a member of the Sigma Nu and S. P. O. fraternities and was elected to the Legion of Honor of the De Molay.

J. C. Tappan acted as best man to the bridegroom. The nuptial music was rendered by John Mann as soloist and Miss Dorothy Johnston at the piano.

Simmons—Jerome Wedding Solemnized.

Of interest to a wide circle of friends is the announcement of the marriage of Mrs. Winifred Simmons and Lawrence Al Jerome, which was solemnized on Saturday, August 19, at the rectory of the Sacred Heart church at 5 o'clock, with the Rev. Father McGraft performing the impressive ceremony in the presence of a group of close friends.

Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Jerome left by train for a wedding trip to Chicago, where they will attend the Century of Progress, and upon their return to Atlanta will be at home at 278 Twelfth street, northeast.

Kramer—Clein.

Mr. and Mrs. B. Kramer announce the wedding of their daughter, Rose, to Sidney Klein, which took place Saturday evening, August 19, at 9 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents. Rabbi Tobias Geffen and Rabbi Harry Epstein performed the ceremony.

The lovely bride was gowned in brown crepe and her hat matched her costume. She wore a shoulder bouquet of orchids and valley lilies.

The bride is the only child of Mr. and Mrs. B. Kramer. She graduated from Commercial High school in 1932. The bridegroom is the only son of Mr. and Mrs. P. S. Klein. The bride and bridegroom left for a wedding trip.

Miss Johnson Weds James C. Crowley

ATHENS, Ga., Aug. 19.—The marriage of Miss Elizabeth Johnson and James Carlton Crowley, of Watkinsville, was solemnized Tuesday afternoon at 5:30 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Elijah William Johnson, Dr. W. H. Faust, pastor of Gordon Street Baptist church of Atlanta, performed the ceremony in the presence of friends and relatives. Dr. Faust performed the same ceremony for the bride's parents 25 years ago.

Mrs. Ruby Williams and Mrs. W. T. Cunningham greeted the guests, and the bride's book was kept by Mrs. Roy Crowley. The ceremony took place before an improvised altar of ferns interspersed with baskets of white trumpet lilies flanked by white tapers in candelabra. The bride and bridegroom stood beneath an umbrella made of white net and showered with persimmon and lilies of the valley.

Preceding the ceremony R. L. McConnell lighted the tapers. A musical program was rendered by Mrs. C. J. Reynolds and Mrs. H. H. Harris, sister of the bridegroom. Mrs. Reynolds sang "Because" and "I Love You Truly." Mendelssohn's wedding march was used for the entrance of the wedding party, and during the ceremony MacDowell's "To a Wild Rose" was played by Mrs. Harris.

Mrs. Frances Johnson, sister of the bride, and Miss Sybil Dunaway, of Colbert, were bridesmaids and wore pink organza and carried muffs made of fern and small flowers of variegated colors and their small turbans matched the muffs. Mrs. R. L. McConnell, sister of the bride, was matron of honor and wore pink net over satin and carried an arm bouquet of pink gladioli.

Little Bobby Hale, dressed in a white suit, acted as ring-bearer, and little Miss Ruth Fowler, wearing a white organza dress, preceded the bride, scattering rose petals along the pathway.

The bride was met at the foot of the stairs by her father, who gave her in marriage. She wore an exquisite gown of mousseline de soie over satin, made of white and pink lines, with tucked flounces forming the skirt, and short coat of ivory satin caught in front with seed pearls and long full sleeves flared to the elbow. Her becoming veil was of illusion and was arranged with a band of orange blossoms. She carried a shoulder bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley. She was met at the altar by the bridegroom, accompanied by A. Y. Crowley Jr., of Watkinsville, cousin of the bridegroom, who served as best man.

The bride's gown was a handsome gown of black French lace combined with black satin, and a shoulder bouquet of red carnations. The bridegroom's mother was gowned in black chiffon with matching accessories, and wore a shoulder bouquet of pink rosebuds.

Immediately after the ceremony an informal reception was held and Misses Lois Knox and Kathryn Cunningham, of Lexington; Misses Mamie Fullilove, Sue Rene McLee and Virginia Harris, niece of the bridegroom, of Watkinsville; Misses Jewel Johnson, Florelle Morris and Bessie Lee Cross, of Athens, assisted in serving. Music was rendered by Miss Virginia Brauner.

Mr. and Mrs. Crowley left for a motor trip along the gulf coast of Florida. The bride traveled in a navy blue triple sheer ensemble, with hat and other accessories to match. Upon their return on August 20 Mr. and Mrs. Crowley will reside in their new apartment in Watkinsville.

Miss Nell Lee Ruark Weds Raymond Green.

Of cordial interest is the announcement of the marriage of Miss Nell Lee Ruark to Raymond Eugene Green. The ceremony was quietly solemnized on Wednesday evening, June 28, at the Peachtree Christian church. Dr. Robert Burns performed the impressive ring ceremony in the presence of a small group of relatives and close friends.

The bride is the youngest daughter of L. J. Ruark Sr., of Woodville, Ga. Her charming personality has won her a host of friends who will be interested to learn of her recent marriage. The bridegroom is a graduate of Georgia Tech, and is connected with the Eastern Air Transport Company. Mr. and Mrs. Green are residing at 1084 North avenue.

Georgia Federation District Meets Student Aid Foundation Head Predicted on Today's Official Page Is Leader in Club Activities

Red-letter days that come to club women in Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs are those on which the districts hold the annual group meetings, which are miniature conventions promoting the activities of state and district federations and bringing clubwomen into intimate contact with each other and with club work. In 1932, a resolution was adopted which said "that district presidents co-operate in setting up a schedule for their meetings so as to allow a day or more between date of their respective meetings in order that officers and visiting club members may attend without physical exhaustion."

Pursuant to that resolution, the time and place of 10 meetings are being arranged, and, while the schedule is not complete, tentative plans are given so there will be no conflicts. If convenient, it is the wish of Mrs. J. W. Gholston, state president, and Mrs. Albert Hill, first vice president, that the meetings begin in September and suggest the ninth district at Toccoa on September 26 or 28. This has not been confirmed.

The seventh district will meet at Dalton on October 8, and fifth in College Park on October 6. October 12 is date suggested for third at Montezuma, but neither the third nor sixth has definite date. Tenth will convene on October 14, place to be named. The state executive board will be held on October 19, and Tallulah Falls school trustees will hold their meeting on preceding day, October 18. October 24 is suggested for the eighth district to meet at Broxton. The second at Bainbridge has been verified. Also the first, at Vidalia, October 27. Warm Springs will be held to the fourth district, date to be named to suit President and Mrs. Roosevelt, who are expected to be guests of honor. Mrs. Roosevelt is a member of Warm Springs Woman's Club. It is hoped that a complete schedule can be published at an early date.

As a member of the state library commission, Mrs. J. W. Gholston, president of Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, has been appointed by Governor Eugene Talmadge an official delegate from Georgia to the annual conference of the American Library Association to be held in Chicago-October 16 to 21. Mrs. Gholston regrets that she cannot attend this conference as she will hold an executive board meeting of Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs on October 19, in Atlanta.

Library service comes second to the state federation in her affections, and in urging the continued interest of all clubwomen in this important activity she makes particular mention of the effort being made by the Georgia state library to centralize all Georgia material, quoting Miss Ella May Thornton, state librarian: "In 1932 the Georgia state library was named by the Social Science Research Council as the 'state document center' for Georgia in a nation-wide network to gather all primary source materials. These include government documents, association institution and organization literature, etc.

"The American Library Association has now taken over the project from the council and the Georgia state library, in co-operation, is emphasizing and intensifying its long established program of building up such a collection. I am working to enlarge and to extend my official policy and purpose of making this library the repository of all such materials as are not now comprehended in the well-established scheme of organization and operation of some other library or institution.

"No considerable part of Georgia's resources are centralized and are being systematically developed but much is unorganized and scattered and separated over the state. In both these instances it is the plan, in which progress is being made, to set up here in the state library machinery which will provide full information as to the agencies to which engineers and students in one field or another may resort. Also, as chairman, I am representing the state committee, which will be kept with the original papers for the initiation of local and special activities which will promote the far-reaching and widely beneficial plan for the presentation of those valuable public supplies of information and knowledge. The interest and assistance of many persons and groups is being sought and an encouraging response received. Let me enlist and count upon your aid at whatever point it may be within your power to enlist."

Bicentennial Contest Will Terminate.

The contest sponsored by the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs will close September 1 and the judges will award the set of books. Library of Southern Literature, to the contestant sending in the best manuscript on some phase of Georgia history. The rules of the contest were that the district press chairman and district presidents should judge the best contributions in each district and send these to state headquarters. Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, Henry Grady hotel, Atlanta, where the central group would name the winner. All districts have not been heard from so those desiring to take part are urged to be prompt.

Mrs. Charles J. Haden, of Atlanta, chairman of student aid foundation of Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, whose plan of presenting the student aid history on the official club page in The Constitution has been of untold value to state clubwomen. Mrs. Haden is one of the leaders in social and club circles in Georgia. The history of the foundation has been presented in a series of articles and is concluded with the one published here below.

By Mrs. E. K. Large, Executive Secretary of Student Aid Foundation.

The six articles on student aid published on the club page during this summer have had as their objective a chronological outline of the important steps which created and established the Student Aid Foundation as it now exists on its twenty-fifth anniversary. This was in accordance with the plan of Mrs. Charles J. Haden, the present chairman of the student aid committee. Mrs. Haden, when she came into office, felt that it would be part of her duties to accurately preserve the story of the labors of the founders of student aid and their successors. To this end it seemed advisable to compile a short history of the foundation from the material available through charter members, old minutes and from letters and official data. To continue this phase of the work a subcommittee was appointed including Mrs. Willis Hagan, Mrs. John Spalding, Mrs. Harold Wey and Mrs. A. V. Gude, who will continue to file all important data from time to time. This work is being done by the Student Aid Foundation in the Rhodes Memorial hall.

The last article dealt with the Helen and David Woodward endowment fund, so generously planned and brought to fruition by Mr. and Mrs. David Woodward, both of whom died in the summer of 1931. In that article it was stated that early in the spring of that year Mrs. Woodward, because of ill health, resigned from the chairmanship of the student aid committee. Mrs. Charles J. Haden, vice chairman of the committee and member of the board of trustees, was unanimously elected to take Mrs. Woodward's place. Mrs. Haden was familiar with every department of the work, as she had been interested in it from its earliest days, had been a member of the committee for many years, and had served as vice chairman since Mrs. Woodward's induction into office in 1927. Mrs. Haden had hardly undertaken her new duties, however, when the great shock caused by the death of Mr. and Mrs. Woodward brought all work to a standstill. The loss seemed irreparable to the friends of the foundation.

Though halted for a time, it was soon realized that the project must not be allowed to falter but must go forward in spite of its sorrow and to this end the office of president, now left vacant by Mrs. Woodward's death, must be filled. Several years previously Ben Read, president of the Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph Company, had been appointed to the board of trustees. This appointment was made because it was felt that the vision and keen business judgment which Mr. Read possessed would make him of invaluable assistance to student aid. It was to Mr. Read that the board of trustees now turned for the future president of the foundation and his selection has proved a great good fortune to all lines of the work. There is a striking feature in the personnel of the Student Aid Foundation. Though one leader may be taken, someone is at hand to assume the honor and responsibility of the duties of the work, and so the mantle of service passes from one to another. With the splendid leadership of the present president of the foundation and that of Mrs. Haden, chairman of the committee, student aid enters upon its twenty-sixth year with courage and confidence.

Trustees Invest.

The board of trustees, never stronger in its membership than at the present writing, invests all funds and directs the financial policies through its active executive committee. How wisely this committee has done its duty is proved by the fact that during the depression period the income from investments has never been curtailed. The student aid committee, which is the direct link between the foundation and the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, was never more alive than now to its responsibilities. Mrs. Haden, when she took the office of chairman, realized that the efficiency of the work must in a large measure depend upon the committee. She had the logical member of the committee as her vice chairman, Miss Marian Woodward, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Woodward. Miss Woodward's student aid background was such that she became an immediate force for efficiency in all phases of the work. Mrs. Haden was equally fortunate in her secretary, Miss Emily Harrison, who has been a loyal and efficient helper in all phases of the work.

The faith of all these believers in student aid is written into the minutes of the foundation. In these minutes may be found the composite picture of those great pioneers in this educational project of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs. There is the picture also of each and every girl who has come to student aid for help. This group of over 300 girls is now a group of high achievers among the young women of Georgia. The chairman, Mrs. Haden, said in her last report: "Student aid has become the hallmark of high achievement among the young women of Georgia. The chairman, Mrs. Haden, said in her last report: 'Student aid has become the hallmark of high achievement among the young women of Georgia. The chairman, Mrs. Haden, said in her last report: 'Student aid has become the hallmark of high achievement among the young women of Georgia.'

Lithonians Hear Miss Codington Will Wed Atlanta Clubwomen Paul L. Shafer in September Speak at Meeting

An interesting program featuring the Georgia bicentennial was given Thursday at the Lithonia Woman's Club. Mrs. George L. Pratt, of Atlanta, fifth district chairman of the bicentennial celebration, arranged the program and presented Mrs. Fritz Jones, who gave a vivid account of the history of the state, from Oglethorpe's landing at Yamocraw bluff, to the present day. Mrs. Jones, a past publicity chairman of the garden club of Georgia, attracted the attention of her audience by her charming manner and her splendid and understanding grasp of the many details in the life and growth of the state.

Mrs. John E. Brickman, president of the Perennial Garden Club, of Atlanta, read a paper prepared by Mrs. John H. Mullin, which included a delightful description of early gardens and historic trees of Georgia.

The business session, presided over by Mrs. Charles L. Davidson, was opened by the reading of the collect by Mrs. Ken Davidson. Mrs. C. J. Tucker read the minutes. Mrs. Edgar Bailey, librarian, reported the loan of 173 books during July. Mrs. E. E. West, chairman of education, reported $5.50 and Mrs. O. L. Barnwell, chairman of public welfare, added $5.55 to the treasury from her department. Mrs. Henry Watson, chairman, made a further addition of $9.50, accruing from the baseball game given by the club and the volunteer firemen. The aim of the club and the finance department is to pay the last installment of $500 due December 1 on the club building.

Projects for the coming months include a special edition of the Lithonia Journal, written and edited by the clubwomen, assisted by W. J. Clark, editor, and the annual carnival to be presented October 8. Guests at the meeting included Mrs. John Crawford, president of the Toccoa Garden Club and sister of Mrs. Jones; Mrs. H. D. Castleberry, of the Study Club, and Miss Lucile Castleberry, of the Junior Club, of Gainesville; Mrs. Coker White, of Florida, guest of Mrs. E. P. White, and Miss Virginia Strickland, of Bord.

Hostesses were Mesdames Carey Cameron, Dan Bond, John Malone, Mercer Marbut and Miss Emma Lee Daniel. Mrs. Carl Karstson, of Atlanta, chairman of the welfare fifth district, will present the program at the next meeting on September 7, at the clubhouse.

Comer Junior Club Presents Playlet.

The Junior Woman's Club of Comer, recently presented a four-act comedy, "The House Across the Way," with choruses and tap dancing as additional features. This entertaining program was supervised by the junior leader, Miss Eleanor Thompson, and showed splendid training and development for community drama, one of the phases of club work. The presentation was ultra modern, very penny and appealing to the audience. Excellent talent was demonstrated by the cast, which included: Co-eds, Mary Sanders, M. C. Carmichael, Betty Richards, Louise Edwards, Doris Winters, Pauline Smith, Jane Keller, students, Doris Smith, Mercier Davis, Chauncy Wallingford, Clifford Barnes, Hal Wickland, Henry Birchmore, Jack Spencer, Grady Brown.

Martha Groves was the "widow with ambitions"; Sarah Loftin, the "trouble maker"; Dorothy Cox, the "landlady"; Helen Sanders, the "singer." Helen Sanders performed the tap dances. The junior girls were divided into two choruses and the play was by Henry Birchmore and Mary Allen. Troupe manager, Announcer was Rosalie Coyle.

libraries, clubs are urged to co-operate with the library in carrying out the library's book week program arranged for the entire community. In other towns, schools and clubs will have to combine and take the lead in planning the week's activities, making the program instructive to the children and young people of cultural value to adults and inspirational to all in stimulating a love for Georgia literature. In order to do this, opportunity must be provided for the people of each community, young and old, to see and examine and handle these books, so one of the chief features of Georgia book week will be a display of books by Georgia authors and about Georgia. Let this be a community-wide project in asking all residents to lend their homes for this purpose, as well as calling on the book stores, libraries, schools and other collections. Every community can have a creditable display of Georgia books by pooling resources, assembling the books in some safe, central place with a committee in charge at all times to look after them, open to the public daily.

Towns fortunate enough to have local authors of note, either living or dead, should feature the works of these authors displaying personal relics, photographs and other mementoes in addition to their books. "First editions" and autographed books should be given special attention. A fitting tribute to those who have given us our heritage of Georgia literature would be to hold a reception one afternoon or evening during the week honoring local authors or their descendants, inviting all organizations in the community and county to participate in this, especially literary clubs, writers or poetry clubs and those most outstanding in literary pursuits. In a number of counties, county historians have within the past year made a vital contribution to Georgia historical literature in having written or compiled a history of the local county, and this occasion would provide a suitable opportunity to honor Georgia literature in the past or present.

State-Wide Celebration.

The celebration of Georgia book week should be state-wide as every section has done its part in giving to the state and nation authors of Georgia in every field of literature. Georgia and community will arrange its own celebration in accordance with local resources and facilities. Many clubs have studied Georgia literature throughout the year or have included selections from Georgia authors on each month's program. Others have presented the library day program on Georgia literature. The chairman of library service, but as clubs begin their fall and winter series of study let all unite in paying tribute once again to our Georgia authors and carry out the following program, wholly or in part, during Georgia book week or at September club meeting.

Georgia book week program for clubs feature roll call, "My Favorite Georgia Author," paper or discussion, Georgia poets and poetry; reading selection from a Georgia poet; music, preferably by a Georgia composer; paper, "Georgia's Contribution to Current Literature"; contests, vote on Georgia's most famous author, or "A simple story told in titles of Georgia books," or "Georgia author's contest."

Material to carry out this program may be borrowed free for postage for two weeks' loan from Georgia library commission, state capital, Atlanta.

Woman's Club Members Support Recovery Program

Members of the Atlanta Woman's Club announce that they are co-ordinating their efforts in the support of the national recovery program as are patriotically supporting the stores and establishments displaying the blue eagle, which signifies the president's re-employment agreement has been signed.

The club members will sign the consumers' pledge cards 100 per cent strong as soon as the cards are available at the postoffice states Mr. Max Land, president of the club. The meantime they state that they are living up to the pledge as though they had already signed the card. "They realize that the women are playing an important part in the NRA campaign and that through the buying power their influence is estimable," says Mrs. Land.

Another bridge tournament in a series which Mrs. Carl Vretman conducting at the Atlanta Woman's Club will be held at the club Tuesday morning, August 20, at 10 o'clock. Mrs. Vretman precedes each tournament with a valuable lecture a lesson and also gives instruction throughout the play.

An unusually low rate of 50 cents per person per tournament is being offered and many are taking advantage of this splendid opportunity. Reservations should be made by calling the club at Hemlock 4636 or by calling Mrs. J. T. DeLesseigne, chairman on arrangements, at Wain 4438.

Family Reunion.

A family reunion was held recently at the country home of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Shannon, near McDonough. Three generations were represented by those gathered around to enjoy the picnic lunch.

The guests were Dr. and Mrs. C. Cooke, Virgil Cook Jr., M. M. Jean Cooke, Mr. and Mrs. C. H. McRobert Carmichael, Mrs. Martha Bradford, John Shannon, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Shannon, Mr. and Mrs. Judson Harmon, Joe and Jack Harmon, Miss Mary Davis, all of Atlanta; Dr. and Mrs. S. L. Rivers, Brunswick, Ga.; Mr. and Mrs. Stanford Ferry College Park, Ga.; Mr. and Mrs. J. Len Kenyon, Miss Mary Kenyon, Howard Kenyon, of Morrow, Ga.; and Mrs. Sidney Turner, Miss Jean Turner, of Hapeville, Ga., and Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Shannon and Virgil Shannon, McDonough, Ga.

Clothed in special social significance is the announcement made today by Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Codington of the engagement of their daughter, Miss Catherine Fort Codington, to Paul L. Shafer, of Miami, Fla., the marriage to be solemnized at a beautiful ceremony in late September.

The titian-haired bride-to-be is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Codington and is one of the most admired members of the younger contingent. She possesses winsome beauty and charm and has endeared herself to a host of friends. During her family's residence in Coral Gables, Fla., she attended Girls' High school and later completed her education at the Florida State College for Women at Tallahassee, Fla. Miss Codington is a poet of decided merit and has been invited by Mrs. Vivian Larimore, poet laureate of Florida, to release a column of her poetry in the Miami News for September 17.

Miss Codington is a representative of families long prominent in social, civic and cultural fields of the nation. Her maternal grandmother is Mrs. John P. Fort, who was before her marriage to the late John P. Fort, Miss Tallulah Ellis, a sister of the late Judge W. D. Ellis. Her maternal great-grandfather was the late Dr. Thomas Fort, of Milledgeville, renowned physician of his day. The late Mr. and Mrs. Augustus Codington, of Macon, formerly of New Jersey, were her paternal grandparents, and her great-grandfather was John Codington, whose brother, William Codington, was one of the founders of Rhode Island.

The bride-elect's mother was the former Miss Kate Fort, of Macon, and her sisters are Miss Lulah, Emily and Mary Codington. Her brothers are Arthur Codington Jr., John Codington and Avery Codington.

The bridegroom-elect, like his charming bride-to-be, is a representative of prominent families and his ancestry furthered the development of Florida and Pennsylvania. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Shafer, of Miami, and is prominent in social circles of the state. Following the wedding the bride and bridegroom will go by motor on a wedding trip and upon their return will go to Coral Gables, where they will make their home.

Watermelon Cutting.

Venus temple No. 22 of Pythian Sisters will have a watermelon cutting from 8 to 9 o'clock Wednesday evening, August 23, at Mrs. Green's residence, 410 Glen Iris drive. The public is invited to attend, and the price of tickets is 10 cents and can be secured from the committee including Mrs. Sarah Blake, 113 Hunter street; Mrs. Ida Kenny, 579 Plum street; Mrs. Anne Jarrell, 257 West Mercer avenue; and Mrs. Katie Butler, 197 Peachtree street.

Georgia Zinnias Bloom In Indiana Gardens.

The state president of Indiana Federation of Women's Clubs, Mrs. Edwin N. Canine, writes to tell the state president of Georgia federation, Mrs. J. W. Gholston, of the success in growing lovely zinnias from seed, which were donated by H. G. Hastings Seed Company, of Atlanta, to Mrs. Gholston, to be included among the favors from Georgia for state president's banquet at the general federation council in Richmond, Va. Mrs. Canine says: "Just a note to tell you how often I have thought of you and Georgia zinnias during the summer because of the beautiful zinnias blooming so profusely in our flower garden from the seed which you gave us at the state president's dinner in Richmond."

The weather has been so hot and dry here in Indiana that many of our flowers have been a failure, but with those Georgia zinnias; they seem to thrive on hot sunshine and lack of rain and are blooming beautifully, so big and red, much like immense roses. The guest speaker was president is having the same good luck with hers."

Manchester Woman's Club.

Manchester Woman's Club held its annual picnic at Warm Springs on August 13, members of the Warm Springs and Woodbury clubs being invited to unit in making it an enjoyable occasion. It was agreed to make this event an annual one for the three clubs represented.

July meeting of the Manchester Woman's Club was held in the home of Mrs. J. A. Johnson with Mesdames L. M. Bradford and J. B. Bell, co-hostesses. Included on the program presented by the leader, Mrs. J. L. Edwards, on the subject, "Reforestation." Mrs. W. E. Griffin gave a reading and Miss Carrie Johnson rendered vocal selections. "Beautification of Our Highways" was the subject of a paper by Mrs. J. L. Edwards which was followed by a piano solo by Miss Julia Barbee. The guest speaker was Mrs. Roder Terrell, of Greenville, who is a great lover of forests and a well-known authority on forest preservation and various types of trees. She was given an enthusiastic hearing and her interesting and instructive talk was greatly enjoyed.

Miss Cleckler and Rev. Glasure Will Be Married in October

MENLO, Ga., Aug. 19.—Announcement is made today of the engagement of Miss Leida Jean Cleckler to Alton Henley Glasure, of Union Point, formerly of Commerce, Ga. The wedding is to be celebrated in October. The bride-elect is the older daughter of Mr. and Mrs. O. L. Cleckler, of Menlo, Ga.; her sister being Miss Hughie Cleckler. On her maternal side she is descended from the Penn. Marks, and Bolton families of Virginia. Her mother was the former Miss Oneida Phillips, daughter of the late Colonel M. M. Phillips and Mrs. Phillips, of Aconith, Ga. Her paternal grandfather is the late Jefferson D. Cleckler, of Menlo, Ga.

Miss Cleckler is an honor graduate of Shorter College, Rome, Ga., having received her A. B. degree in the class of 1931. She was a member of the Phi Sigma and Alpha and the Argonauts. Throughout her college career she took an active part in the various phases of student life, holding responsible offices in the Student Government Association, on the Y. W. C. A. cabinet, in the camera, choral and study clubs.

She is an accomplished pianist and organist. Following her graduation from Shorter College, she did graduate work for her M. S. B. degree at the Oberlin Conservatory of Music, Oberlin, Ohio.

The Rev. Glasure is the son of Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Glasure, of Commerce, Ga. His grandparents were the pioneer settlers of northeast Georgia, coming there to live on a large land bounty which was awarded for his grandfather's services as an officer in the Revolutionary War. After being graduated from Commerce High School he attended North Georgia Agricultural College, where he received his A. B. degree in 1931. Later he received his D. B. degree from the Columbia Theological Seminary, and his A. M. degree from the University of Georgia.

The bridegroom-to-be is a member of the Pi Kappa Alpha social fraternity. In college he was prominent in athletic and forensic activities. At the seminary he was president of the Society of Missionary Inquiry during the centennial of its organization. Since June he has been located in Union Point, Ga., where he is pastor of the Presbyterian church. Miss Cleckler has chosen October 19 for her wedding, this date being the wedding anniversary of her mother and father and wedding plans will be announced later.

Miss Clifton Weds Luke G. Beauchamp

A quiet event of last Monday was the marriage of Miss Marie Clifton, attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. V. Clifton, and Luke G. Beauchamp, which was solemnized at 11 o'clock in the morning by the Rev. Dr. A. A. Smart, close friend of the bridegroom's father, the late Bishop Beauchamp—in the presence of a group of close friends.

The bride was lovely in a striking suit of navy blue faille crepe with white satin and a close-fitting hat of navy blue. White accessories completed the smart costume and she wore a shoulder bouquet of orchids. Mr. and Mrs. Beauchamp will be at home at 1207 West Franklin street, Richmond, Va.

Mrs. Quarles Is Hostess
Mrs. William T. Quarles was hostess to members of her bridge club at luncheon on Friday in the private dining room of the Tavern on the Green. The guest list included Mesdames Joel Dean, George Manley, Walter Hutchins, Fain Slaughter, Arthur Neuhoff, Roy Walker, Julian Burns and Quarles.

Through the courtesy of Mrs. Stacy Hill a bookcase has been given to the division to be placed in Rhodes Memorial hall, where the records, relics and histories of the World War Veterans will be preserved, and also the records of the Service Star Legion made available for future generations. One of the beautiful and sacred records planned is the roster of Gold Star mothers and their sons. Members and friends are invited to use this depository for the letters, pictures and treasures they wish preserved. Mrs. W. F. Melton is chairman of this department, and serving with her will be a member of each chapter appointed by the chapter president, and Mesdames Marcus Beck, Beverly DuBose, J. A. Dyer, W. E. Mann, A. B. Solomon, Howard Payne Sr. and Samsatt Gardner.

Of interest and value to the organization will be the history that is being compiled by Mrs. J. C. Mellichamp, bicentennial chairman for the Georgia bicentennial commission, to be filed with the histories of Georgia patriotic societies. Service Star Legion since its founding has had a distinguished record for genuine service. Mrs. L. P. Rosser, chairman of gift scholarships, requests that applications be made to her at once for the one-half scholarship available at Washington Seminary through the generosity of Professor Scott.

Miss Harriet Noyes is visiting in Chicago and will represent the Sam D. Jones chapter as delegate to the national convention September 18 to 24. Miss Carrie Green, of Dalton, much beloved in patriotic circles, is the newly elected president of the Dalton chapter. At the recent election in Elberton, Mrs. Howard Payne Jr. was elected president, other officers serving with Mrs. Payne are Mesdames L. A. Adams, H. J. Price, Hal Byrnes, A. J. Stovall and W. M. Bowers. Sympathy from the division is expressed to Mrs. John L. Tye, a beloved member, in the recent passing of her daughter, Miss Myrtle Tye.

Mrs. Fred G. Suits, of Milwaukee, Wis., national vigilance chairman, in a recent letter urges chapters to cooperate fully in the NRA movement. Mrs. J. G. Falck, national president, through Mrs. Rhoda Woodruff, executive secretary, has issued the call for the national convention, September 18 to 24, in Chicago with headquarters at the Stevens hotel, guests of the Chicago chapter. Mrs. Willis G. Murray, president of the Chicago chapter, will be the official hostess for the convention.

Dinner Given.
T. D. Grinsley entertained a group of friends at dinner on Friday evening at the Tavern on the Green. Invited were Mesdames Jacqueline Van Riden, Willa Becham, Mrs. Frances Hill and J. Marion Coleman, Henry King and A. B. Grinsley.

Crane—Crisfield.
ATHENS, Ga., Aug. 19.—Mr. and Mrs. Rufus Crane, of Athens, announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Vanita Tate Crane, to George Fenwick Crisfield, of Savannah, which took place at the home of her parents on August 18 at 4:30 o'clock. The ceremony was performed by Dr. J. C. Wilkinson, in the presence of the immediate families.

Vaughan—Wheeler.
Mrs. Walter James Vaughan, of Thomasville, Ga., announces the marriage of her daughter, Annabel, to Joseph Lee Wheeler, of Thomasville, on August 19.

Evarts—Purvis.
Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Evarts, of Adel, announce the marriage of their daughter, Flora Mae, to Bill Purvis. The ceremony was performed Thursday, August 17, at the home of the bride's parents by Rev. Stanford.

Garden Club.
The Old-Fashioned Garden Club will entertain at tea in honor of Mrs. G. W. Lee Tuesday, August 22, at Hillside Oaks, home of Mrs. Frank Penn. Friends of Mrs. Lee are invited to call between 3 and 5 o'clock.

Atlanta Girls Make Plans For College

With the approach of the fall season thoughts turn naturally to the opening of school, and members of the feminine contingent are agog with excitement over the approach of the school term. Chats over the teacups and at dances and sports have to do with favorite sororities, campus togs and the gay festivities incident to the exodus of the college set, faring forth to seek learning within the portals of some favored institution.

Miss Rena Candler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Candler, will attend Fairmont College in Washington, D. C., and will have for schoolmates Miss Julian Boykin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Boykin; Miss Leone Brooks, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Brooks, and Miss Adele Ruffner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ruffner.

Miss Virginia Dillon, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Dillon, will continue her education at Emory University and will combine most happily her scholastic career with the social life of Atlanta's winter colony. Miss Bee Rich, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Rich, plans to return to Smith College, where she has achieved an enviable reputation with the honors heaped upon her for her literary attainments.

Miss Elzie Grace Brown, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Brown, will return to Hollins for the coming session. Miss Mary Large, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. K. Large, will journey to the east in mid-September where she will continue her education at Vassar College. Miss Louise Richardson, charming daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Richardson, will be a schoolmate of Miss Large's, and Miss Lucy Yundt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Yundt, will complete the trio of Atlantans attending Vassar. Miss Jay Goodman, of Paducah, Ky., who is visiting Miss Large, will return to Vassar in the early fall and she and Miss Large will be classmates.

Miss Marion Yundt, Miss Lucy Yundt's twin sister, will enter the senior class at the Garland School of Home Making in Boston, Mass. Miss Josephine Meador, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Meador, Reserve Officers Will Give Ball On August 24

FORT MCPHERSON, Ga., Aug. 19.—Reserve officers on duty at Fort McPherson will entertain at a banquet and dance to be given Thursday evening, August 24, when the guests will include several hundred members of the military and civilian social contingents. The banquet will be held at 7 o'clock in the regimental mess hall at the garrison, followed by the dance at the Fort McPherson Officers' Club. Major Nathan Hunter, of Madison, is chairman of the entertainment committee and the other members are Captain C. Eyer, of Savannah, and Lieutenant W. H. H. Jones.

Sport-loving Atlantans and members of the military set will attend the polo game to be played Sunday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock at the garrison polo field between the Governor's Horse Guards and the Fort McPherson team. Captain George Cook, of Augusta, will act as referee. The players for the guard will include Lieutenant Wesley Moran, P. D. Christian Jr., Gerald Graham, W. D. Williamson and W. E. Smith.

The Fort McPherson squad will have in the lineup Major Reese M. Howell, Lieutenant Cameron Sweeney Jr., Lieutenant Christian Clark, Lieutenant Scott Sanford and Cadet Philip Musgrave, of the United States Military Academy.

Mrs. Crump Garvin entertained at a luncheon at her quarters on Friday. Quantities of golden glow was arranged throughout the quarters and tall green tapers were placed in silver holders. Covers were placed for 16 guests.

Miss Adelaide Howell Is Visiting Here.

That talented Atlantian, Miss Adelaide Howell, whose deep and exquisite contralto voice has charmed radio listeners, is vacationing in the city visiting her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Allen Heidenreich, at their home on McAliley road. Numbered as one of the most gifted artists singing on the radio, Miss Howell has contributed a wealth of enjoyment to her audiences during her residence in New York for the past year.

Miss Howell left Atlanta on Labor Day, 1932, to seek success in the radio world as a blues singer. An especial favorite of hers is "Stormy Weather," which she has used with marked success during the past few months. The rich tones of her voice are suited for the rhythm of the song and the story told in lilting words and music.

Her radio debut was made in New York early last September over WMCA. Under the direction of her manager, Miss Howell was presented in a series of radio numbers with programs varying in length from an hour to a half hour and a quarter an hour. She has sung over WOR in the studio at Broadway and 40th streets and over WHN at Times Square.

As a singer in vaudeville she has met with decided success and MISS CANDLER is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Candler and this popular school belle will be enrolled at Fairmount Seminary in Washington, D. C. Miss Welling, daughter of Mrs. Arthur Welling, will also attend school this winter in the national capital at George Washington University. Mrs. Wilkerson was before her recent marriage Miss Marguerite Snelling, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Snelling, of Los Angeles, Cal., formerly of Atlanta. Miss Gage is the daughter of Major Philip Gage and Mrs. Gage, and she will be listed among this season's debutantes. Miss Mallett, daughter of Mrs. Henry Robinson, has just returned from a visit to her aunt, Mrs. A. W. Eckert, at Spring Lake, N. J. Photographs of Miss Welling and Miss Gage were made by Asano, Japanese photographer. Mrs. Wilkerson's picture was made by Misses A. L. and L. W. Mead.

Miss Hulit Wiley And Lt. Pressley Wed August 29

Glamour and color of the military will be reflected in the wedding of Miss Hulit Wiley, daughter of Colonel Noble James Wiley, United States army, and Mrs. Wiley, and Lieutenant Milton Hughes Pressley Jr., United States army, son of Mr. and Mrs. Milton Hughes Pressley, of Miami. Assembling representative members of both civilian and military contingents, the wedding will be solemnized Tuesday, August 29, at 8 o'clock in the evening in the chapel at Fort McPherson.

Bishop H. J. Mikell will perform the impressive marriage service. Preceding the ceremony Mrs. Joseph Aman will render a program of exquisite nuptial music. The lovely bride-elect will be given in marriage by her father, Colonel Noble, and she will have Mrs. Harold L. Mace, of Fort Benning, as her matron of honor. The attractive bridesmaids will include Miss Susan Noble, of Fort McPherson, and Miss Page Michie, of Fort Benning.

Lieutenant Pressley will have his brother, John Pressley, of Miami, as his best man. Lieutenant Harold L. Mace, United States army, Lieutenant J. B. Coolidge, United States army, Lieutenant Ernest Easterbrook, United States army, and Lieutenant Charles Deckner, United States army, brother officers of the bridegroom-elect, will be groomsmen. As the bride and bridegroom turn from the altar the groomsmen will raise their sabers to form a gleaming pathway of steel for the newly married couple.

Following the wedding Lieutenant Pressley and his bride will leave for a wedding trip by motor and upon their return early in the fall they will go to Fort Benning for station. Lieutenant Pressley will be a member of the company officers' class for the coming year and he and his bride will be delightful additions to the ranks of the younger married contingent.

Miss Ridley Weds Mr. Beauchamp On August 30

The First Methodist church on Peachtree street will be the scene of the wedding of Miss Anne Phillips Ridley to William Benjamin Beauchamp, of Atlanta, formerly of Richmond, Va., whose engagement was recently announced by the bride-elect's mother, Mrs. James B. Ridley. The marriage will be solemnized Wednesday morning August 30, at 11:30 o'clock, and Bishop Warren A. Candler will perform the impressive marriage service.

The beautiful blond bride-elect will be given in marriage by her maternal uncle, Charles J. Warner and she will have as her only attendant, her sister, Mrs. Martha Ridley MacIntyre. The musical program to be rendered prior to the ceremony by Mrs. Charles E. Dowman will include exquisite and appropriate selections.

Emerson Gardner will act as Mr. Beauchamp's best man, and the ushers will include Robert Troutman, Harold Dillon Hatton Lovejoy and Dr. Robert Y. Stephens. After the wedding Mr. Beauchamp and his bride will leave for a wedding trip to the east and upon their return they will make their home on Collier road.

Anniversary Celebrated By Atlantans.

A beloved Atlanta couple, Dr. and Mrs. W. Earle Quillian, celebrated their 28th wedding anniversary on Tuesday, August 15, at a beautiful dinner party given by their close friends, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Tappan. The handsomely embossed wedding cake was topped by 28 pink tapers and encircled by pale pink rosebuds.

Mrs. Quillian, as the former Miss Laurie Cassilly, of St. Louis, went to Dalton to visit the Rev. and Mrs. W. S. Quillian, the parents of her fiancé. Plans for a fall wedding in St. Louis were made by the engaged couple, but the illness of the Rev. Quillian changed their plans. Desiring that Dr. Quillian should perform the marriage service, the fair bride-to-be wired her mother in St. Louis to come to Dalton for the ceremony, and the wedding was solemnized at the home of the bridegroom's parents.

Wearing a gown fashioned of imported pineapple cloth posed over pale blue satin, and ornamented with tiny rows of blue forget-me-nots, the lovely young bride took her marriage vows. She carried a diminutive satin-bound prayer book showered with flowers and she wore white satin slippers.

After the wedding, Dr. Quillian and his bride journeyed to Lookout Mountain for a wedding trip, and at its conclusion they established their residence in Atlanta, where they are popular members of the social contingent.

has to her credit a number of programs. Miss Howell resided at the A. W. A. Club on 57th street and was feted at a number of social affairs both by members of the eastern and southern society, the latter group including Atlantans who were visiting in New York.

Pocket Handkerchief Garden Is Described.

A pocket handkerchief garden is the term which Mrs. Julian Harris applies to the picturesque retreat which graces the rear of her home on Myrtle street. Guarded by a brick wall, where English ivy trails its graceful length, the garden offers the favorite haunt of Mr. and Mrs. Harris. From the terrace, flush with the lawn, one may sit in gay deck chairs and watch the amusing antics of Dusty Miller, the Harris' huge cat which races to greet the guests and offers a purring approval. The garden reflects the charm and originality of its owner and in the informal planting and arrangement a wealth of beauty and loveliness has been achieved.

Gay hollyhocks lift their bright-hued bonnets against the sturdy brick wall and Shasta daisies guard the brick terrace. Mrs. Harris' favorite flowers grown in gay profusion and the old-fashioned coxcomb suggests the prim gardens of the grandmother's day. Adding a note of sentiment to the garden is the periwinkle which grew from a small plant carefully transported by the Harrises from the garden at Turnwood, where the beloved Joel Chandler Harris edited his first newspaper and did his first writing.

Coleman-McKeever Rites Took Place at Quiet Ceremony

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Coleman, of Atlanta, announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Dee Coleman, to Daniel Axford McKeever, of Orlando, which was quietly solemnized at 11:30 o'clock Saturday morning. The ceremony, witnessed by the immediate families, was performed by Dr. Ernest Risley, who is acting rector of All Saints' in the absence of Dr. Meminger.

The bride and bridegroom entered together. The bride, a lovely blonde, was wearing a navy blue tulle sheer gown, fashioned with high neckline trimmed in a narrow collar of white silk. The short flare sleeves were made full with white trimming, and a navy three-quarter length coat and wide navy belt completed her costume. She wore a small navy silk stitched sailor hat with a narrow band and ornate buckle with veil. Her slippers and bag were of navy blue kid and she wore white kid gloves. Her flowers were a corsage of gardenias.

Mr. McKeever is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel McKeever, of Orlando, and is connected with A. K. Adams Construction Company, of this city.

leaves in mid-September for New Orleans, where she will be enrolled at Sophie Newcomb. Miss Betty McDuffie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. C. McDuffie, plans to attend this same college and will make the trip to Louisiana with Miss Meador.

Miss Dahlis McMurdo, daughter of Lieutenant Colonel H. B. McMurdo, United States army, and Mrs. McMurdo will leave on September 21 for Athens, where she will enroll as a member of the freshman class at the University of Georgia. A close friend of hers, Miss Frances Stanton, of Hampton, Ga., will attend the university, having completed her first year's work a season ago.

Miss Adger King, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. H. King, will go to New Orleans to attend Sophie Newcomb.

Miss Rosalyn Pate, charming daughter of Major Benjamin B. Pate, United States army, and Mrs. Pate, will return to Shorter College this fall and her roommate, Miss Eleanor Nelson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Nelson, will accompany her to school.

Miss Laura Maddox and Miss Elkin Goddard will return to Ogonitz, near Philadelphia, to resume their studies. They are daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Robert F. Maddox and Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Goddard and are popular members of the sub-deb set of society.

Miss Rosebud Leide may decide to remain in Italy and cultivate her exquisite soprano voice under famous instructors in Milan and Naples. Her voice has wonderful tone and quality and she inherits her musical talent from her gifted father, Enrico Leide. If Miss Leide returns to America in October she expects to enroll at the University of Georgia to take a special course of study.

Miss Epsie Dallis and Miss Virginia Marshall will enroll at Agnes Scott College in Decatur, where they will enter the sophomore class. Miss Dallis is the younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Dallis, and Miss Marshall is Mrs. J. A. Wood's daughter.

Miss Sarah Smith, youngest daughter of Marion Smith, will return to Ashley Hall in Charleston, S. C., and will be accompanied by Miss Betty Martin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Macon Martin, who was also enrolled at this fashionable southern school last year.

Miss Sarah Kenan will return to Ashley Hall in Charleston for her second term, as will Miss Margaret Rankin, who attended this school last year. They are daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas S. Kenan Jr., and of Mrs. Shorter Rankin and Lucia Smith, twin sisters of the Marion Smith household, will also leave in the early fall for school, the latter going to Washington, D. C., and the former to New York, where she will study art. Another attractive Atlanta who will be enrolled in school at the national capital is Kathryn Welling, who will resume her studies at the George Washington University.

Misses Ellen Fleming and Virginia Merry have decided to enroll at the Florida State College in Tallahassee and they will leave Sunday, September 10. Miss Merry is vacationing in Europe and will return early in September to meet Miss Fleming for the trip to Florida. Miss Barbara

Miss Wheeler and Mr. Brantley Are Wed at Quiet Ceremony

MRS. JOSEPH BRANTLEY.

Cordial interest is centered in the announcement made by Mr. and Mrs. Paul E. Wheeler, of this city, of the marriage of their daughter, Lucie Frances, to Joseph Brantley, which was solemnized last Friday evening.

The bride is a talented and charming young woman of attractive personality. Since finishing her education she has held a very prominent business position in Atlanta. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Ollie Brantley and the late John R. Brantley. He has resided in Atlanta since boyhood and is well known in business and social circles. The ceremony was performed by Dr. R. Z. Tyler, former pastor of Grace Methodist church, in the presence of only the immediate family.

Sheer crepe of poudre blue fast in the east she will be feted at a number of social affairs. She plans to return to Atlanta early in the fall and will resume her literary work.

Romantic Associations Envelop Engagement.

Despite reports from Nassau credited to Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel II, denying that her son, Anthony J. Drexel III, is engaged to marry Miss Helen Alvis Howard, of Atlanta, the marriage is on the social calendar for the near future. Although Miss Howard and her fiancé only met last month, her acquaintance with his mother dates back to an introduction which took place more than a year ago in Nassau. The romance of Miss Howard and Mr. Drexel has provided a topic of conversation for the past week, and the announcement of their engagement was a pleasurable surprise to their legion of Atlanta friends.

The bride-elect is the only child of Dr. and Mrs. Clinton Chappell Howard and her introduction to her fiancé was made at the home of his parents in Nassau, whither Mr. Drexel went after leaving Eton College. Lissom Miss Howard was visiting her Finch schoolmate, Miss Betty Collins, who lives in Nassau, when an invitation from Mr. and Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel II, bade them attend a party given for their youngest son shortly after his arrival from England.

Clad in a red and white plaid organdy gown, which Miss Howard had fashioned with her slender, tapering fingers, she and Miss Collins repaired to the party. It was a case of love at first sight with the charming southern girl and the young gentleman from above the Mason-Dixon line. Their romance began under the starlit tropical skies, and will have its culmination in their marriage in Atlanta, the date of this auspicious ceremony to be announced later.

There is quite an interesting story lurking behind the selection of the red and white plaid organdy gown which brought out the glory of dark brown hair and eyes of the fair Atlantian. The material was purchased in an Atlanta department store by "Annie," the bride-elect's devoted colored nurse, who has been in Dr. and Mrs. Howard's employ ever since their only daughter was a baby. A letter written from Nassau by Miss Howard informed her mother that she had nothing to wear to the party, and forthwith Mrs. Howard, who was not feeling very well on that particular day, sent Annie to town under instruction to buy some material for the new costume. She chose the red and white plaid organdy, had the material mailed to Miss Howard, whose deft and capable fingers fashioned the becoming costume.

A fitting climax to the romance came when former Governor John M. Slaton and Mrs. Slaton were told about the engagement of their relative and beloved god child, and requested the privilege of giving the announcement party at Wingfield, their Andrews drive estate. Not a single person invited to the party was aware of its nature or the impending announcement.

Therefore, great was the surprise when Mr. Slaton stood in the center of the drawing room and revealed the interesting news to some 40 young friends of the bride-elect. Miss Howard was radiantly lovely in a shimmering white satin gown which offset her brunet beauty to perfection at the announcement party, and a spray of purple orchids ornamented her shoulder.

Schoolgirls Meet at Vassar College Gates.

An acquaintance, which had its origin a year ago at the huge entrance gates to Vassar College, ripened into a warm friendship for Miss Jay Goodman, of Paducah, Ky., and Miss Mary Large, whom she is visiting at her home on North avenue. Last year they journeyed by separate trails to Vassar College to pursue their studies and fate decreed that before entering the portals that their paths should cross. They became fast friends, and the stately Miss Large with her exotic coloring is a perfect foil for the blonde beauty of Miss Goodman.

Both girls are fond of sports and excel in riding, golf and swimming, and are graceful dancers. They return in September to Vassar to resume their studies in the sophomore class, and expect to graduate in the same class in 1936.

Milow-McCanless.

CHARLOTTE, N. C., Aug. 19.—The engagement of Miss Mildred Elsie Milow and Edward Essen McCanless is announced today by the bride-elect's father, Albert Milow, of Charlotte. Miss Milow is the granddaughter of Mrs. James Milow and the late James Milow, of Atlanta. She received her early education at North Avenue Presbyterian school, later attending St. Mary's at Raleigh, N. C. Miss Milow and Mr. McCanless are popular members of the young set in Charlotte and their wedding will be a brilliant social event of the autumn season.

Mrs. Burns' New Book To Be Published.

The "Social Science Reader," a collection of stories of shepherd life for children, by Mrs. Annie Johnson Burns, of Decatur, has been approved as a supplementary reader for the third grades by the state board of education, according to an announcement made by M. L. Duggan, superintendent.

The volume will be released by the American Book Company in the early fall and will take its place among the worthwhile volumes. The book was written and illustrated by Mrs. Annie Johnson Burns and is regarded as one of the most modern and complete textbooks of its kind. Interesting story form is used in presenting facts of sheep raising, preparation of wool and skins for market and the various phases of the work.

A native Georgian, Mrs. Burns spent her girlhood near Mount Vernon. She was graduated from Teachers' College in Athens and has done post-graduate work at the University of Georgia, Emory University and Oglethorpe. As an instructor at Ellijay, near Jasper, she has rendered valuable assistance to the teachers working toward their degrees and has lent her brilliant mind to the education of others.

Mrs. Burns is attending Columbia University during August, taking a brief course in observation work, and while patient Griselda who is a success is so unusual that she stands out.

Under ordinary circumstances, it's better to depend on charm rather than persistence.

And, if the man you look upon as a hero doesn't seem to know you're alive you'd better not waste time by insisting upon attracting his attention. Move on rapidly to more fertile lands. Of course, there's a chance that you may be the great exception—that through sheer pertinacity and concentration you'll end up at the altar with the man of your choice, but it's far more likely that your only trip to the altar will be one to make vows of chastity.

"He can be had" Is the Slogan We Learned From Mae West.

THERE are moments when urging merges into insisting and when questioning also comes under that heading. "But why can't you come?" an over-urgent hostess wants to know (and very unwisely too, because some day she may be told). "I'm sure that you can arrange to come if you really want to. Let's leave the whole matter open and you can let me know later." All very flattering, perhaps, but it does not really mean that she thinks her party will be a failure without you, or even that she cares terribly whether you come or not. It just happens that she's the annoying type who can never accept a refusal and who has never learned to take no for an answer. It's true that the English owe much of their greatness to the fact that they never know when they're beaten, but, after all, what is virtue in a nation can easily be a defect in an individual.

Questions are practically always in bad taste and they are the last resort of the dull-witted who can't find out what they want to know by more subtle means.

The most unforgivable questions, however, are not the ones asked out of curiosity but those asked merely for conversation's sake. Never ask a question unless you really want to know the answer, and if you don't get a prompt and direct reply or receive a monosyllabic one, have the tact to let the whole matter drop. If your "Do you live alone?" is countered by a curt no, try some other subject quickly. Anything further will make you sound as if you are prying.

No Nice Girl Insists (Even When She's Right)

Alice-Leone Moats

WHEN you're invited to a luncheon or dinner or any kind of a party, don't ask who else is going to be there before accepting. That is the most tactless of all questions for, whether you intend to or not, you give the definite impression that you aren't sure whether you want to go, and that it all depends upon who the other guests are. If you're uncertain you can easily stall by saying that although you have another engagement you'll try to get out of it and from there go on to discuss the party casually and only as if you were displaying a friendly interest.

Even a man can't get away with being right all the time—but a woman who doesn't make a practice of being wrong at least part of the time, may display unusual intelligence but very little sense. If you have the misfortune to find yourself in the middle of a heated argument, which doesn't really mean much to you, drop out if you possibly can.

There's always a way of stopping an argument if only by suddenly remembering some very urgent household matter that must be attended to immediately.

And even when you find the proof that you were right in a dictionary or encyclopedia, don't drag them out just to rub in your rightness—that is, if you know enough to realize that a woman's great appeal for man isn't mental. Another occasion when it's wise to give in, is when you have made a couple of false starts on a story and have been interrupted each time. Let the whole thing go, then and there. The interruptions may not have been made on purpose, but, whether intended or not, they'll make your story fall very flat when it finally gets told since, by then, it will be apropos of nothing.

THERE'S such a thin line between insistence and rudeness that sometimes it is difficult to tell the one from the other. You may very much want to play bridge but if the others don't take up your suggestion with alacrity, it is wiser not to refer to the game again. That's the sort of thing that finally does you out of invitations, particularly for weekends, when hosts will think twice before having someone who always tries to run the party and forces the other guests to do things which they have no desire to do. A party must be very dull indeed to have all the guests willing to leave at the same time, so you may be sure that whoever you go with, will either want to go home before or after you do. If you're the one who's tired and bored, why not leave without any fuss? Don't attempt to force someone else who is having a good time to leave with you. When you're sure that your escort, or the rest of the group you're with are enjoying themselves, slip out and go home, leaving word that you have gone. There's always a taxi to be had, and in the country, it's usually possible to find someone to send or take you home in a car. When you're in doubt about the others, ask them whether they want to leave and if they seem unwilling, don't insist that they go. You haven't the right to make anyone—even husband or fiancé—leave any place just because you happen to want to.

You'll find that the best way of getting a man to go home is to take it for granted that he doesn't want to.

On the other hand, if you are the one who would like to stay on, make some home-going arrangements and then convince your weary escort that he needn't remain because of you. Make it a rule never to be the cause of anyone's staying too long or leaving too soon and you will find that you are classed among the few people who are a real pleasure to go out with.

YOU may be like us and have your doubts about the correctness of the "it's better to lead than to force" school of thought concerning the upbringing of children, but there should be little question in any woman's mind but that it's the best policy to adopt when dealing with men. In the long run it really pays to go about getting what you want by roundabout, indirect methods—even information. A man's past life is never supposed to be any concern of yours, and if you are wise you will prefer not to know anything about it. However, if you can't down your curiosity, the only way to find out what you want to know is not by asking questions and insisting upon being told all, but by putting two and two together and waiting to be told. Almost every man becomes garrulous before seeming indifference.

DON'T make the mistake of insisting upon flowers and gifts; upon two or three 'phone calls a day (most men hate the telephone); upon devotion in public; or upon receiving a letter every day when the love-of-your-life goes away on a journey. Don't lay down the law and deliver ultimatums to the effect that if he sees some certain person again, dances with anyone else or goes out with another woman all is over between you. It is dangerous because he may call your bluff.

Remember, never insist upon anything unless you are dead sure that you are going to win your point!

Models Wanted

DROPPED in to see my friend, Bill Black, the handsome hound; he used to be one of my better models when my weekly fiction tales were illustrated by camera—now he is the Big Shot madhouse of "It" and no place for a sedate Columbus. But I DID discover something:

The Models' Guild has calls for 50 models—fashion-models, adapted to work in retail lines!

While the Guild has more than 2,000 beauts registered, all of whom are being kept busy these days of the upturn in advertising, they are almost all models for camera, brush and pen... these are not usually the most successful in the other work, such as are the ones now sought by shops, costumers, etc... The openings are far more or less steady and pleasant jobs at better than the average pay.

Call up the Models' Guild, Bryant 9-6440—or go to the office, 37 West 47th Street—and say Jack Lait sent you.

Plays Wanted

Found another opening—this time for actors, playwrights, composers and other impediments of the theatre... J. J. Vincent, long identified with opera and concert activities here and abroad, including direction of the German Grand Opera Company and such personally conducted stars as Gaski, has gone legit; meaning, he is producing dramas and comedies—meaning if he GETS any.

J. J. has one play, a novelty by a Swiss scientist, which he proposes to produce next month. But he is open to other promising material, as he has organized to devote his experience and talents to our Stage.

He incorporated at Albany as Vincent Theatre Enterprises, of which he is president. Ben H. Atwell, Nestor of American press reps, (representatives, not reporters!) is associated with him, as he has been through many Vincentennial ventures.

Phone Chickering 4-5871-72, or call at 11 West 42nd Street—and say Jack Lait sent you.

Laureate

A precedent for the tribulations of Highlights in its search for a Poet Laureate of New York City has turned up in the experiences of William Rose Benet, himself a big-league bard, in assembling an auto-antology of native poets, whom he asked to select from their own works what they liked best... and why, and also some notations as to how or for what good reason (if any) the selection came to be written.

After great travail, he did gather enough for his "Fifty Poets," recently published. E. E. Cummings replied with a drawing of a charging elephant, and wrote: "I do not know nor can I tell what I should care or not care to not have or have, but my favorite poem is 'A Grave' by Miss M. Moore, beginning 'Man looking at the sea'—and ending 'it is neither with volition nor consciousness.'... So Miss Moore's poem made the symposium.

Dorothy Parker, whose most famous unprinted line had to do with why she didn't reply to a certain communication, didn't reply to this one, either; nor did John Crowe Ransom... and Edna St. Vincent Millay said "I do not like the idea of this anthology and find a choice impossible for me." (And she only had to pick from HER OWN stuff!)

T. S. Eliot responded: "My conclusion is that I have no poem which I should care to have presented to the public as my favorite. I am very sorry, but am afraid there is nothing to be done about it." And Conrad Aiken didn't fancy the idea, either.

Benet felt that Eliot, Millay and Aiken were too distinguished to be left out, and he therefore included sketches of them, but none of their iambic hexameters or odes to a landlord.

Ezra Pound, via cable, blew up. Benet is on the staff of the Saturday Review of Literature, and Ez cabled a voluminous reply "dilating what I conceive to be the harm you and your colleagues have already done in American criticism... You have been preserving mildew and falsifying critical standards." Pound added that he loathed the "sob stuff" and "personal touch" which he felt and feared Benet would give to the anthology... So Pound was left out. (Huh—he should be!)

Nearing the End

Having been pelted with commentaries on the opus published last week, the outpourings of one of the "humbler poets, whose songs gushed from the heart," Highlights herewith submits another—likewise verbatim et literatim—by a lady of Manhattan:

Oh, Lord, my God, I come to the throne of prayer,
Am I a Coward, Crouching of despair?
Hope, pity and sorrow I bring,
I will meet fate and all things I resign,
Wait, I tell you My every act refined
For aching void—All so early destroyed.

Now I go back, if I can live this World,
I have look'd—I have loved.
Now I am whipt at last,
And Struggle is Past.
Oh, fate do your worst,
All My devotion to you I have Nursed,

I must never meet him no more Furtive hopes—Can never restore
Our holy mission—As shut by fate
I shall not linger. At the gate
Silently I go towards the shores of rest,
I be gone and Vanished with the blest.

The title of that is "Nearing the End." Next week we will publish another gush by the same poetess, with photographic reproduction of the richest portion.

HOW WOULD YOU SPEND YOUR LAST DAYS ON EARTH?
Read WHEN WORLDS COLLIDE—the amazing story of man's last days on earth, running serially in the daily Constitution.

By Whitley Noble

WHEN Rudyard Kipling wrote that Judy O'Grady and the colonel's lady were sisters under the skin he only piled up more dislike for himself on the part of the gentle sex of homo sapiens. Women do not relish it being said of them that they are pretty much alike the world over. They do not like being spoken of or written of as a sex, and they are right, for it is wrong, totally wrong, to herd them in comment, favorable or unfavorable. Each one is just as much an individual as the cleverest man that ever lived.

And yet, Main street is Main street anywhere, whether it is Sauk Center, Minn., or a collection of grass huts in the dripping jungles of the Congo. And where there is Main street there is gossip. And who does the gossiping; who is envious of her neighbor's bit of a skirt, made from a yard of trade calico; who tries to steal her friend's husband; who is proud, and vain, and jealous; and who says: "You mustn't tell a soul, but so and so said so and so?" Most men really are old women, too.

Take the case of Mrs. Mumbo Jumbo, who occupies one of the nicest bungalows just off the Main street in any village of equatorial Africa. True, she has no education to speak of, and club life with her is almost nil. She wouldn't know what you were talking about if you suggested social activity or welfare work. She never was a co-ed nor a schoolma'am. She can sing, in a fashion, but never learned to play the piano, for jungle dampness is hard on the strings. She never has dropped auction to take up contract. In fact, her games are simple amusements, such as a primitive sort of her health by avoiding the bath. Her bathtub, the river, is too full of hungry crocodiles to permit leisurely bathing, anyway.

Mrs. Mumbo Jumbo never quarrels with her husband or with the other men-folk of the town, but she is a veritable virago when it comes to talking about the other women.

She fights with the other women, too, thus wasting time which would be much better spent cooking for her husband, who leads a hard life indeed, hunting and fishing and gambling and going to war.

She has babies, lots of them, and wears out her lungs scolding them, but she actually is a good mother to them in her way. She always takes her own children's part when they row with the youngsters next door.

When she gets too old to be anything more than an extra mouth to feed she creeps off into the jungle to die, provided one of her sons-in-law doesn't throw her to the crocodiles in the big river.

crap shooting. Mrs. Mumbo Jumbo smokes, though, being impelled by a real liking for the weed rather than by any desire to show her independence.

She doesn't get very far in displaying her independence, for the head of the house can whack off her head at any time and get a new wife for the price of a goat or two.

Even with this threat forever hanging over her, she has a pretty good time. She dances whenever she feels like it. When the witch doctors get out the big tribal drums and begin thumping upon them she really cannot keep her feet still. When the white trader comes up the big river with his boatload of calico, brass wire, and salt she is always right up at the bargain counter, and she is as pleased with a yard of turkey red cotton goods as an Oshkosh debutante with a new silk ensemble. She likes to decorate herself with beads and wire, an old cigarette tin, or a penny hand mirror. Ear pendants to her are not those tiny things that white women wear. She prefers an empty tomato can suspended from one lobe and possibly the rusted handle of an old teapot from the other. She likes to have her hair done up by the best hairdresser in Main street, and then have it smeared over with nice, sticky clay. She likes to stick a boar's tusk through holes in her upper lip and have her front teeth filed to sharp points to enhance her beauty. Tattooing takes the place of cold creams with her, and she keeps

"BACK TO BIKES"

By NINA WILCOX PUTNAM

SPEAKING of that famous poem "A Cycle of Cathay," how has this bicycle craze affected your family? Up at our place it's now a question of wheels within wheels. The conversation just rolls along. We use every sort of pedal except the "soft pedal" and we got so many bicycles of both sexes locked up in the garage, which we built in the old days when people used to have cats, that I expect to walk in any morning and to find they have mated and that there are a few litters of roller-skates frisking around on the floor!

Pa come home the other night and announced he'd bought a tri-cycle. And when I went out and took a look at it, all I seen was just a straight two-wheeled bike with the name written on it, "The Hotcha Chaser."

"That ain't a tri-cycle," I says. "Oh, ain't it!" says Pa. "Well, I been trying to cycle it for three hours! Try cycle it yourself!"

Sister Anne has got a light blue affair, female of course, and it's as gentle as a lamb. It stands without hitching, except when it gets tired, folds itself around the hitching post, and sits down. It'll trundle along beside her by the hour without barking—not even barking her shins, now it's got used to her. Wonderful pets, these bicycles make! The name of Sister Anne's implement of travel is "Little Wonder" and it's little wonder she got pinched for riding it on the sidewalk. Why every girl who wears practically nothing but them bicycle shorts and a hair ribbon don't get pinched good and hard some place, is more than I can tell you. If a bicycle is considered clothes enough, Heavens help us, what will the girls leave off if they ever take up stilt-walking?

Sister Anne's young man has a bike, too. He's got an ambulance siren on it, you know, one of them false alarms that goes Wheooooo! at you from behind and scares the bundles right out of your hands. His machine is an Installment, and has a chain-drive. He's driven by the chain of installments. It's a second-hand model and he needs a third leg to run it. He tried to turn it in on a motorcycle, but the motorcycle was too heavy and smashed three spokes on the front wheel. When the case came up in the traffic court, the judge wouldn't let him have a lawyer. "Every man his own spokesman in this case," he decided.

Aunt Eata says she's taken up the new great out-door sport, but to me it looks more like wrestling she's gone in for. I was watching her from the window the other morning when she was having a little practice-bout with her bike. The cycle and Aunt Eata met, shook handle-bars, and went right into a clinch. Ten seconds later by my stop watch the Little Giant, as her machine is called, had her down with one shoulder on the ground. Aunt Eata managed to lift the right shoulder and retaliated with a scissors-hold. The bicycle struggled out of it and got her in a half-nelson. Aunt Eata sunk her teeth into the saddle and locked her right around the headlight. The Little Giant squealed and let go, it was licked, ran off down the hill, Aunt Eata after it as fast as her weight would allow and she was calling it things I was surprised to find she had in her vocabulary.

I can't say that Uncle Useless Grant-Smith has actually taken up the new fad, but it's sure put him in mind of old times when Lillian Russell shocked Broadway by appearing in bloomers and a white chiffon veil to keep her cycling hat tied on. For uncle goes around singing that old sweet old echo from memory lane, you know the one:

"Daisy, Daisy, give me your answer do!"

I'm half crazy, my bicycle-rent is due.

But if you'll go fifty-fifty-

We'll get a tandem nifty-

And sakes alive!

You can back-seat drive

On a bicycle built for two!"

Our laundress does a lot of free wheeling. She borrows her bike. Even our dog goes for bicycles in a big way. If he misses, he's usually landed with a kick in the snout but he's a hound for punishment.

This crazy craze is sure getting into every phase of our American life. Why, I even heard where the racketeers are now taking their victims for bicycle rides.

The bicyclists have got so numerous that office buildings have had to change the spelling on their signs to "No Pedlers Allowed," and folks are even naming towns after the darned fad, like "Wheeling, West Virginia" for a sample.

Life has become one long Six-Day Bicycle Race, with the seventh day reserved for making up a new batch of ointment. And while the modern bike-saddle may be comfy, still you can believe me that all the corn-plasters the drug stores are selling these days don't go onto feet.

I personally, myself, have not yet taken up the art of breaking in wild bronco-bikes. I'm waiting until I find one with a Mexican saddle.

ADELA ROGERS ST JOHN Reveals How Spying

The Bri

It's as if Hollywood couples lived in glass houses, with magnifying glasses and binoculars fixed upon their every movement.

But I do say that all history proves that artists have never been famous for the placidity nor regularity of their lives nor for the control and fidelity of their emotions.

There is this, too, to remember. Great truths, they say can always be reversed. If no news is good news, good news is no news. Every Hollywood divorce rates a headline and readers demand it. The happy marriages, of which there are a surprising number, are usually noted merely in passing.

what I suppose you might really call gossip. Yet the gossip is actually without malice. The creative and imaginative type of mind is vitally interested in everything that has to do with human beings, their loves, hates, passions, joys and sorrows. They love to dissect and analyze, to dramatize and often to sympathize. Often they do it quite impersonally, just as though it was any story.

Everyone out there talks too much. I shall never forget one night hearing Jack Gilbert storming with rage over a certain paragraph that had been printed about him and wondering where in the world the reporter had gotten hold of it. And I had heard him tell it himself the previous evening in front of the reporter's wife. They're all like that. With child-like confidence and exuberance they will confide something to ing the report and naturally feeling just a little abused by the fact that Lydell hadn't gone to the theatre with her and therefore given Hollywood a chance to say that he was neglecting her Lydell was annoyed because she felt abused—and they had their first quarrel.

I was at a dinner party with Jack Gilbert and Ina Claire one night, during the time they were married to each other. An argument came up about the relative merits of the stage and the screen and Ina and Jack, who are both positive and very quick, exchanged a few verbal blows. Actually, it amounted to nothing. Before the gang got through with it, it had become a major engagement and each was committed to a real defense of his viewpoint. Every place the couple went for the next week, somebody brought it up all over again—and Jack and Ina found themselves antagonists. Which was not so good.

IN AN artistic colony such as Hollywood, there are naturally many people who are perfectly swell but who are temperamentally unsuited to marriage. That is probably true everywhere but it is perhaps greater in percentage in Hollywood.

For example, King Vidor, one of the greatest Hollywood directors, was married first to Florence Vidor, one of the loveliest and most beautiful women who ever graced Hollywood, and later to Eleanor Boardman, another splendid girl. Both marriages were wrecked by King Vidor's peculiarly artistic temperament, his utterly different point of view. Yet that same point of view is what has made him a great director.

The happiest Hollywood marriages are those where one or the other is a non-professional, especially if that one is the wife. In fact, it is safe to say that with very rare exceptions, those are the only happy Hollywood marriages.

All marriages where a wife has another business as well as that of marriage are in the danger zone immediately. BUT when that other business is so absorbing, so time-taking, so sure to make a woman self-centered and so apt to make her spoiled as the motion picture career, the marriage is doomed before the bridal bouquet withers.

RICHARD BARTHELMLESS is married to a non-professional, the former Mrs. Jessica Sergeant of New York. It is an ideally happy union because Jessica is a very clever woman and her whole business in life is that of being Mrs. Barthelless—a devoted wife ready to pack up, go world-traveling at a moment's notice, a charming hostess, a perfect housekeeper, a gay comrade whose nerves and body aren't worn out when Dick comes home from the studio dead tired. She keeps the machinery which runs Dick's personal life so well oiled with brains and unselfish attention that he doesn't know the machinery exists. Bob Montgomery, Chester Morris, Edward G.

"Everyone had expected Janet to marry Charlie Farrell"

"THEY WON'T LET you be happy in Hollywood," said Thelma Todd, blonde screen comedienne, the other day, as she dismissed a rumor that she was contemplating divorce. What did Thelma mean? Whom did she mean by "They"?

In the following article, Adela Rogers St. John, who knows her Hollywood as no other American writer knows it, answers the question. Miss St. John grew up in Hollywood, she knew the movie metropolis when it was a village. She is sympathetic with Hollywood people, but devastatingly critical of circumstances there. This is the second of a series of articles answering the question "What Is Wrong With American Marriages?"

By Adela Rogers St. John Author of "The Skyrocket," "A Free Soul," "The Single Standard," and other celebrated novels.

THERE are a million little reasons why marriage is more difficult in Hollywood than anywhere else.

But there are two big ones. First, the more persons who know of the problems and differences, the big and little quarrels, the jealousies and vanities of a marriage, the more chance that marriage has of going on the rocks.

Hollywood itself is the biggest "small town" in the world and it possesses a rocking chair brigade and a grape-vine that no place you ever knew can even tie.

Every Hollywood marriage exists under a microscope and a spotlight. That's where Hollywood itself exists and if it didn't the theatres would soon be empty. And under that microscope and spotlight, under the busy tongue of its own rocking chair brigade, the pin pricks of ordinary marriage are magnified and intensified into fatal dagger wounds. The very nature of its business and its people makes this inevitable.

Second, by the very purpose of its existence and the essential requirements of its art, the motion picture colony is composed almost entirely of people who are temperamental, artistic, super-emotional and highly imaginative and romantic. If they weren't you wouldn't pay your good money at the box office to see them. I do not by any means advocate the idea that the artist is above or beyond moral or man-made

Let me show you what I mean by the microscope and the spotlight.

If you and your husband disagree over a game of bridge or you resent the fact that he danced three times with Mrs. Blatz during the evening, you go home, pass a few cracks back and forth, exchange a couple of dirty looks, and then kiss and make up like two normal people.

If your husband happens to be a traveling man and while sojourning in the next town has a gay evening which involves a couple of girls brought into the party by some other fellow, the chances are you will never hear about it. If you do and no one else knows, you will be perfectly able to contain yourself after you've told him just what you think of his conduct. If quite a number of your friends get to know about it, your wounded pride and vanity and your sense of injury and what you owe your own dignity will become pretty important and there may be serious trouble.

That latter circumstance, doubled and tripled, is what always happens in Hollywood.

I REMEMBER one day talking with four Hollywood girls, all of them well-known stars and very attractive women. They all frankly admitted that the most difficult thing to bear about any slight straying of their husband's attentions to some other women was not actually fear or jealousy, but the hurt pride which came of everybody in Hollywood knowing about it and everybody in Hollywood always knows everything about everything. We have no secrets from one another.

Hollywood folk are tremendous talkers—you and the next day you will discover that they have likewise confided it to seven hundred and forty-two other people. Then they're always surprised and upset when it's all over town.

All these things decrease privacy practically to the vanishing point and the deep spots of every marriage must be planted firmly in privacy. Only two people can make a successful marriage. In Hollywood, you marry the whole darn colony—and eventually the world and his wife.

Here is a little example.

JANET GAYNOR and Lydell Peck married in the glare of Hollywood and world interest. That was natural, Janet is a world-figure. Everyone had expected Janet to marry Charlie Farrell and most people were a little disappointed because she didn't. It was a screen romance they wanted to see come true.

One night Janet and her mother went to see a Shakespearean play together without Mr. Peck acting as escort. Now the truth of the matter was that Mr. Peck didn't happen to care for that particular Shakespearean play. But no such simple explanation would satisfy the dramatic soul of Hollywood. The Hollywoodian part of the audience gasped. Where was Lydell? Well, they'd always said that marriage wouldn't last.

The next day the Brown Derby jittered with the news.

Soon Janet's phone began to ring. Was it true she and Lydell had separated? Janet was amazed and when she found out the reason for all this uproar she was even more astounded. By the time Lydell came home from work, Janet was almost hysterical and exhausted from deny-

Successful

Nancy Carroll's first husband was a charming and very able young writer..

Robinson, Jimmy Cagney, Clark Gable, Wallace
Beery and Leslie Howard are all very happily married—and all to women whose only profession is being successful wives.

Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Pickford made a splendid success of their marriage for ten years under the tremendous handicap of two famous careers. They did it partially by withdrawing themselves almost altogether from Hollywood.
During those happy years they lived in great seclusion at Pickfair, never going into society and seeing in their home only close friends.

Then, a few years ago, Douglas grew restless.
They sailed very close to the rocks and were saved only because Mary is one of the wisest, sanest and sweetest women who ever lived.

She recognized the danger. And she faced it with the fine courage and honesty that has always been hers in everything. For a time she gave up her career and concentrated upon a desperate attempt to make her marriage the great romance it had once been.

But she failed. And I think one of the reasons she failed was because of the continual pressure of rumor, the strain of attempting to adjust herself and Douglas to a very delicate situation under the glare of the spotlight.

WHEN I talked with Mary some weeks ago during her visit to New York, she told me that she and Douglas had reached an understanding that was amicable to them both. Douglas wished to travel, to live abroad, he was mortally sick of Hollywood, of making motion pictures. His heart was not exactly in the highlands a-chasing the deer, as the old poem has it, but it was in Manchuria a-chasing long-haired tigers, in England chasing titles and golf balls, in the Alps climbing mountain peaks. He didn't want a home and some life, he didn't want any part of Hollywood.

Mary, on the other hand, loves her home deeply, and through years of loving care has created in Pickfair an ideal home which any woman would love.

So they had agreed to go their separate ways to some extent, agreed that Douglas should travel, that Mary should make pictures and live at Pickfair. There should be no separation.

But it didn't work out. Douglas, at fifty, has apparently reached that "dangerous age" where he really doesn't want marriage, and particularly marriage so public, so constantly under surveilance as his marriage to Mary Pickford. So, wittily and suddenly, the end came. And the screen's great romance ended. Yet there are two people who were once as much in love as anyone I've ever seen and who probably would have still been together anywhere except in Holliwood.

"One day someone found a new leading man for Miss Chatterton.... After the first love scene there wasn't any question..."

Joan Crawford once told me that the most difficult thing she found about her marriage to Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., was the fact that they were both so worn out and on edge when they came home at night that neither had anything, not even tolerance to give the other.

Bebe Daniels and Ben Lyon are making a go of it. But both Ben and Bebe were literally brought up in Hollywood. Bebe was Harold Lloyd's leading woman when she was 13 and Ben was an office boy at the old Metro studio when he was in short pants and a leading man before he was twenty. They know all about Hollywood—all its peculiarities and pitfalls. They're playing on their home ground and it looks as if they'll win a ball game. But they are exceptions.

Many weird things happen over night in Hollywood that of necessity upsets the delicate equilibrium of matrimony.

When Hoot Gibson and Sally Eilers were married, Hoot was a big western star with a big salary and a lot of standing. Sally was a little girl who had made a couple of pictures and hadn't been able to get a job for months and months. Without warning, the whole thing turned over. Sally became a star when she got her big chance in Vena Delmar's "Bad Girl." Hoot's contract wasn't renewed and

"Joan Crawford once told me that the most difficult thing she found about her marriage..."

"Bebe Daniels and Ben Lyon are making a go of it."

westerns suffered a slump. Whether Sally got high hat or Hoot's masculine pride turned him disagreeable, no one knows. Anyway, there were soon quarrels and separations.

After a trial separation some years ago, Ruth Chatterton and Ralph Forbes were reconciled

"Richard Barthelmess is married to a non-professional.
It is an ideally happy union because..."

"When Hoot Gibson and Sally Eilers were married, Hoot was a big Western star with a big salary..."

"I was at a dinner party with Jack Gilbert and Sue Claire one night... An argument came up."

and began an amiable, friendly and satisfactory married life.
Then one day someone found a new leading man for Miss Chatterton. His name was George Brent. After the first love scene they played together there wasn't any question in either of their minds. They had fallen deeply and passionately in love.

Ordinary married people don't have to play passionate love scenes with handsome strangers.
It's a very trite old question, "Aren't you ever jealous when your husband is making love to another woman in a picture?" and of course stage and screen folks always laugh it off and poo-poo the mere idea. But a great many romances, as you know, have started on pictures—indeed a great many more than you will ever know about.

Very few people know the actual story back of Ann Harding's divorce from Harry Bannister, at least the true psychological story.

The beautiful Miss Harding is a woman of great unselfishness and real nobility of character.
A straight-shooter, with an endearing modesty and a keen sense of humor that somehow you don't expect with that madonna-like face. If it had been, as many people thought, a mere choice between her career and the father of her child and her marriage vows, I'm pretty sure that Ann would have sacrificed her motion picture fame.

BUT unfortunately before it came to that,
Hollywood had killed all love between them.
Everyone who knew Ann and Harry well when they were married, agreed that a strange professional jealousy of his wife's success had turned Bannister temporarily into a domestic tyrant, who interfered with his wife's work and wasn't at all the charming man Ann Harding had married. And it had all come about, as things do with incredible swiftness in Hollywood, almost before Ann realized it.

Nancy Carroll "outgrew" her first husband, a charming and very able young writer named Jack Kirkland. After her trip to Hollywood and her sudden rise to fame as a movie star, Nancy gave up all thought of her marriage—and a divorce followed.

Taking the picture as a whole I would say that gossip wrecks a large percentage of Hollywood marriages—and the woman's motion picture work another large percentage.

SECKATARY HAWKINS AND HIS FAIR and SQUARE CLUB

CHART OF THE CAVES.

(Seck Hawkins and his Fair and Square Club, camping on Seven Willows Island, find the secret headquarters of Fong Shu, who has threatened Hawkins and Detective Jeckerson for sending four of his sons to prison. Stormie, Hawkins' Great Dane, muzzles the Tripod of the Caves, containing the largest diamond in the world. Jeckerson orders the dog to dig, and brings to light the Emperor's Sword. Knowing that Fong Shu is searching for the sword and the jewel, Seck and Jeckerson take them to their friend, Su Chow Ming, who sends them to Sam Kwong's laundry shop for safe keeping.)

I SLEPT late the next morning, after that long night of excitement and the weary hours of rushing back and forth, ending with the midnight trip to Watertown and our lodgement of the precious sword and jewel with kindly Su Chow Ming. And when I awoke, it all seemed like one long night-mare. It was as though I had dreamed it all. It all had been so fantastic, so unreal, so much like a page out of the book of the Arabian Nights, somehow—

"Begin your pardon, sir," said a voice as a head peeped itself between the tent flaps. "Is your honor really awake, that is?"

It was Collison, one of the trusted Jeckerson's old and trusted lieutenants, who with others had been guarding our camp.

"Come in," I sang out, rubbing my eyes and getting out of my cot. "Glad to see you, Mr. Collison—"

"It's Sergeant Collison, now sir," he said, with a grin, as he put his old battle pipe in his mouth and began to blow smoke into my tent. "It happened last night, y' know."

"What happened last night, Sergeant Collison?" I cut in, with a laugh, as I doffed my pajamas and reached for my bathing trunk.

"The bally promotion!" he exclaimed. "You see, I was just plain officer in the police when detailed to Mr. Jeckerson's service, sir. And now, after the Watertown chief heard as how I had a hand in helping find the emperor's sword, sir—well, bless you, they've gone and promoted me to sergeant—"

"Bully for you, Collison!" I said, and I grabbed his hand as I started to go out. You'll make a good sergeant—"

"But I don't want to be, sir!" he exclaimed, catching my arm. "I'm afraid they'll be taking me away from Mr. Jeckerson, now, sir. And I do want to stick it out, sir. I like him. He's been chief to me ever since I started with him. I want to stay—"

"What? And not be a sergeant?"

"No, sir! I thought as how you'd have something to say about it—"

"Who? Me? Why, Collison—"

"Well, you are the chief of the junior police, Judge Granberry calls you that, and I thought if you would talk to Judge Granberry, he would have some influence with the chief of the Watertown police, you see, sir. And after that, perhaps the chief would let me stay on with Mr. Jeckerson, sir. Will you do it—just as a favor to me, sir?"

"You bet I will, Collison," I said, warmly, as I shook his hand. "You've been through a lot of mysterious cases with Jeckerson, and so was I. And I happen to remember that you were always of very much importance, when the time came for fast work and a steady head. I'll never forget your help in the Mystery of the Purple Light and the Ghost of Lake Tapho—your were splendid, those times, Collison—"

"Thank you, sir, very much, sir!"

"And I always say, Collison, that friends should not be parted—"

"You know what I mean, good friends who have teamed together through the years—they should stick together for all time, if that be possible—"

"And you will ask Judge Granberry?"

"Leave that to me," I said, as I broke the grip he held on my hand, which he had continued to shake up and down as a pump handle while I talked. "I'll see you through—"

"Oh, thank you, Hawkins," he said, with a chuckle. "And now, sir, I have a message—"

"Give it to me later, I'm going for my morning dip—"

"Oh, it won't keep, sir. It's what brought me here, sir. Jeckerson told me to watch for your awakening—he didn't want me to disturb you until you awoke from your sleep, sir—and then he said he wanted to see you as soon as possible after that—"

"Where is he?"

"In the doctor's tent, sir." Jeckerson sat alone in the tent as I came through the opened flap. He was bending over a small table, upon which he had spread a strange, wrinkled sheet that looked like oiled silk. He looked up quickly as my shadow darkened the entrance.

"Ah!" he exclaimed, with a smile. "Have enough sleep?"

"Plenty," I made me fit for another adventure," I said, as I waited for him to tell me what he wanted. "Of course—"

"Pull up that chair and sit down," he said, motioning across the little table. "We have something here that might interest you."

I drew up the chair and sat down. He flattened out the wrinkled sheet upon the table.

"Su Chow Ming did this drawing," he said, with a chuckle. "The old fellow is quite a draftsman, eh?"

"It's a map, isn't it?" I asked.

"Yes," he replied, bending over from his side of the table, and putting his right forefinger upon a little spot on the drawing.

"Right here is where we are sitting at this moment. You see, this map is of the whole river bank, for about 11 miles of it, to be exact. This odd-looking bit here represents the island upon which we are camped. Back here is a little 'x' indicating the spot where your clubhouse stands."

"But what's it all for, Jeckerson?" I asked. "Why did Su Chow send you this? What are these odd-looking lines and loops—"

"Well, sit back and listen, and I'll tell you," he said, lighting up one of his favorite long, thin, black cigars. "You know, of course, that Su Chow Ming, as connoisseur for all China, has a very powerful spy system of his own."

"Yes, indeed I knew it—I've had many chances to see it work—"

"Well, it has worked again. Hawkins, my boy, and this time it has done a marvelous job. When Su Chow told me that the Fong Shu was coming back here, we made plans to follow him. On our way back from China we discussed the matter, and I asked Su Chow why it was that the Fong Shu always headed for this section, always in some spot around this old river bank. He told me, for one thing, a steady head, I'll never forget your help in the Mystery of the Purple Light and the Ghost of Lake Tapho—your were splendid, those times, Collison—" happened to occur to me at that time that possibly we might get a chart of all the caves under the cliffs of the old river bank. I suggested it to Su Chow, and he said he had in his spy system men who could explore caverns and chart them. He said he'd have them make a map. Well, here it is—and a mighty fine one, too. But, sonny, it amazes me!

"What? The way Su Chow's men could make the map?"

"No, no. That. But what they have charted here. Why, Hawkins, look! If this chart is true, and I have no doubt it is, then this old river bank is simply honeycombed beneath—even under the very island on which we now stand, my boy—there is simply one huge network of underground tunnels and caves. Follow my finger as it traces these lines—see how the caverns continue their course all through this territory."

And it was easy to read the map, as Jeckerson traced it with his finger, and explained. The map showed that far under the ground of our old river bank, vast subterranean halls and corridors stretched away, linking huge chambers of stygian darkness, in which beautiful crystal formations grew like flowers in a dark garden. And upon close study of the plans, one could see that the caves ran far under the river in some places, and out again into similar caverns under the hills across the river. Far, far down the river for miles—under Seven Willows Island—the very island itself was but a crust of earth, forming the roof of numerous caverns all connected by narrow corridors that nature had hewn out of the rock and limestone.

"How did Su Chow's men get into this, Jeckerson?" I asked.

"Through the entrance to Cliff Cave," he answered. "You boys know that old cave rather well, but you never took the time to look for the entrance that Su Chow's spies found."

"The dickens we didn't!" I said. "We used to follow Stoner's Boy into Cliff Cave. We never had been any farther than the deep pit, as we called it—it was really a chasm, and we never could cross it, until we saw Stoner go across, by swinging on a rope—then we knew that there was more on the other side just like the Cliff Cave itself. But we carried on as far as we could go—"

"Yes, and you got to the Cave of Wonders, where you met Fong Shu, the first of the Fong Shu outfit to discover these caves, and how valuable they would be for the society he represented, to carry out their crazy scheme of domination over the world. Now, see here, at this spot, you will notice down here, the entrance as it is marked by Su Chow's men. Well, that's your old Cliff Cave. Come through, along this line, cross the deep pit here, they've got a rough bridge across it now made of logs. Then down into this corner and so into the Cave of Wonders. Now, back track and see—here's the secret corridor that leads into the Cave of the Black Pool—"

"Oh, yes!" I exclaimed. "I've been that far, Jeckerson! It was where Wu Fong had his great devil fish or octopus or something—"

"All right, but come along further. See, where my finger shows the way. Through this maze of narrow passages, zig-zagging back and forth until we emerge into this most remote spot called—" read there, what's it called by Su Chow map makers?"

"The High Canopy of Chang Yo Sen," I read out loud.

"All right, come along further, here's another little tricky passage, and thence to a round cavern—read what they call it."

"The Screen of the Dragons!" I read, quickly. "Oh, come on, Jeckerson, let's go and take a trip through those caves. By Jinks! I never knew what I was missing, like to, perhaps," said Jeckerson. "But it would be folly to rush into that place, Hawkins, my boy. It's what's behind that screen that matters."

And behind the Screen of the Dragons lay terror! Terror lay behind that golden screen, so beautifully ornamented and lovely to look upon. Jeckerson knew it, and even the Fong Shu feared it. But Jeckerson had a slogan of his own—it was "Be Not Afraid!"

And whatever he knew for certain, he was not afraid of. He knew, too, that I would find out all this in due time. When he should decide it was the hour to strike. I was absolutely sure that when that time came, we should go into the High Canopy of Chang Yo Sen together.

Which we did.

DEAR PEN PALS:

We boys have been spending a lot of our time down in the shade of the old willow tree that hides the cool banks of Cave River. Good fishing there. And maybe you think we haven't caught some! Oh, boy, I had a catfish as big as my arm last Saturday, and Shadow Loomis says he caught one twice as big. I didn't see Shadow's catch, but I'll bet it was a fish story, anyhow. It's always the way, when a fellow goes fishing—to hear them tell it, you'd think they had hooked a whale, when you can bet your last cent it wasn't much bigger than a sun perch.

rate, and vegetable matter that falls on the ground rots very rapidly. From these facts it is rather easy for us to see just the sort of cultivation and fertilization that dahlias need in any section of the country.

We can not very easily change the altitude, but the other conditions are very easily controlled. Constant moisture, plenty of food, plenty of humus in the soil, maturity during September when we are having cool nights and warm days with occasional rains and we should have beautiful dahlia plants.

The dahlias that were found years and years ago were hardly related to the dahlia as we know it today. They were taken from Mexico direct to Europe and there were planted and enjoyed for a great many years before they were introduced to America. In Europe they were bred for regularity in shape of flowers as well as for regularity in shape of the plant itself. In other words the dahlias as they were introduced into this country were mostly of the ball type. As soon as they were introduced here the amateur dahlia raisers of this country started to work breeding for the sort of dahlia that he or she admired. From this breeding we obtained the dahlia as we know it today.

Although dahlias are not particular about the food that they eat, as long as they have plenty of it, there is a food that is best for them, and it is well to use that kind. Most dahlia authorities agree on a mixture of sheep manure, bone meal and muriate of potash. The sheep manure will give the plant humus as well as plant food; the bone meal will supply phosphate and the muriate of potash, the potash. The potash is particularly important for dahlias, as they need quite a bit of this material in order to harden up the dahlia tuber. The greatest use of potash is for tuber growth. The usual proportions in which these fertilizers are used are 25 pounds of sheep manure, 10 or 15 pounds of bone meal and four or five pounds of muriate of potash. At this season of the year small amounts should be added every eight or ten days until the first of October. At that time stop using fertilizers and let the plant harden up as fast as is possible.

MIDSUMMER PRUNING.

There is a small amount of pruning that may and should be carried on at this season of the year. It is always time to remove dead leaves and branches from all kinds of shrubs and trees. This is just a question of sanitation. These dead leaves and branches will harbor all sorts of diseases and insects which will forage or spread to the live parts of the

it today. They were taken from Mexico direct to Europe and there were planted and enjoyed for a great many years before they were introduced to America. In Europe they were bred for regularity in shape of flowers as well as for regularity in shape of the plant itself. In other words the dahlias as they were introduced into this country were mostly of the ball type. As soon as they were introduced here the amateur dahlia raisers of this country started to work breeding for the sort of dahlia that he or she admired. From this breeding we obtained the dahlia as we know it today.

Although dahlias are not particular about the food that they eat, as long as they have plenty of it, there is a food that is best for them, and it is well to use that kind. Most dahlia authorities agree on a mixture of sheep manure, bone meal and muriate of potash. The sheep manure will give the plant humus as well as plant food; the bone meal will supply phosphate and the muriate of potash, the potash. The potash is particularly important for dahlias, as they need quite a bit of this material in order to harden up the dahlia tuber. The greatest use of potash is for tuber growth. The usual proportions in which these fertilizers are used are 25 pounds of sheep manure, 10 or 15 pounds of bone meal and four or five pounds of muriate of potash. At this season of the year small amounts should be added every eight or ten days until the first of October. At that time stop using fertilizers and let the plant harden up as fast as is possible.

MIDSUMMER PRUNING.

There is a small amount of pruning that may and should be carried on at this season of the year. It is always time to remove dead leaves and branches from all kinds of shrubs and trees. This is just a question of sanitation. These dead leaves and branches will harbor all sorts of diseases and insects which will forage or spread to the live parts of the plant. The sooner these parts are removed from the plant the sooner will the plant recover.

Our deciduous spring flowering shrubs may be pruned at this time for two reasons other than sanitation. In the first place, they often grow to a larger size than we wish. In the second place, midsummer pruning will promote new growth this fall, which will result in more flowers during the spring. With a very few exceptions the spring flowering shrubs bloom on the previous season's growth—which, of course, means—that the more growth that can be promoted this season, the more flowers they will have next spring.

In the practice of all sorts of pruning it is of vital importance that the pruning shears be very sharp. The other old rule about cutting plants for any purpose holds good in these cases. The cut should be slanting and just above an outside bud. This will tend to give more open growth for the plants.

Keep a sharp lookout for bugs and diseases. This is the right time of the year for them to appear. They may be killed or controlled easily if they are seen in time, but if they are allowed to multiply too much, they will present quite a problem.

WHAT TO PLANT IN AUGUST.

VEGETABLE SEED: Plant a big fall garden. The depression may not be over by that time and some good, cheap vegetables should be on the shelves. You may plant string and butter beans of the varieties, Plant turnips and rutabagas, beets, carrots, spinach, collards and cabbage.

FRUIT PLANTS: Plant now for fall use.

PERENNIALS: All of the perennials, such as hollyhocks, daisies, peonies, delphiniums, etc., may be planted now for blooming next year. For strong plants be sure and plant not later than the month of August.

LAWNS: Bermuda grass seed may be planted the first two weeks in August.

FLOWER SEEDS: All of the quick-flowering annuals may be planted the early part of this month for all-flower. These flowers include zinnias, marigolds, petunias and the like.

It was easy to read the map, as Jeckerson traced it.

if you don't keep on trying. Get busy and write a long letter and tell me about "A Fish Story" that you remember. That's all there is to it.

WE WILL NOW call the meeting to order and present some of the communications from members.

WE HEAR from a pen pal in South Carolina who will receive a book of our earlier adventures.

Dear Seck:

If I had a fairy god-mother to grant me three wishes, the first one would be to win one of your books! The second to be worthy to be a member of your club, and the last (but not least), to be able to attend your meetings on the river bank. I read your page every week, and with there was more of it. I don't know anyone who would figure out those mysteries and keep as calm as you do when you have such narrow escapes. Judge Granberry sure did you a favor when he sent you Stormie, didn't he? I hope you all succeed in capturing the Fong Shu and his three sons.

Seck, I want to ask a favor of you. Will you please ask your pen pals to write to me? I have been and I'm still waiting, but I'll promise to answer all letters received. I would be delighted to hear from girls and boys from another state.

Yours, fair and square,
THELMA FERDON.
Nemith, S. C.

And now we adjourn for another week. Get busy at once and send in your letter early. All members whose letters were presented in this meeting will be sent a book of Seckatary Hawkins stories. If you happen to be reading this for the first time and are not yet a member, fill out the blank at once and send it in for your certificate and button.

Bye, till next week.

Yours, fair and square,
LOUISE MARTIN.

Dear Seck:

Ge, it's great to be out of school again. Although I'm having a good time, I do miss my teacher and classmates. I don't know what I'm going to do this summer. I guess most of the time I

Justice and a Rum Lynching

By PETER LEVINS.

IT HAPPENED in Ohio, Cradle of Prohibition.

Ohio was ten years ahead of the nation in the anti-liquor movement. In 1908 the legislature passed a county option law, and county after county voted dry after listening to fervid prohibitionists describe the evils of hooch. Among the counties so voting was Licking county, scene of the events in this story.

Licking went dry by a majority of 700. The city of Newark, located in Licking, rolled up a wet majority of 1,500, but the rural vote wiped out this lead. It was a bitter blow, for at that time Newark made more beer bottles than any city in the world.

The situation began to hatch trouble at once. Many saloonkeepers refused to quit selling liquor, their only concession being that they took down their signs and called their establishments restaurants. Trade increased, since as saloons they were forced to close every night at midnight, and all day Sunday; and as restaurants they could simply throw away their keys.

Dry leaders, of course, quickly complained about this. The authorities retorted, "If the people want restaurant keepers arrested for violation of liquor laws, let them prefer charges."

The prohibitionists tore their hair and saw to it that charges were filed. But still the authorities did nothing, for the charges were buried away in musty pigeon holes, and the "restaurant" keepers went right on selling that nasty, nasty Kentucky bourbon, and equally vile brews. The dries were frantic.

DRY RAIDERS SENT TO SCENE.

This continued for 18 months. Glass-blowing factories continued to be the main sinews of Newark, a city of broad streets, lowering elms, beautiful homes and public buildings.

But it couldn't last. The forces of prohibition were in full career and were not to be stopped. Dry raiders were sent forth in three squads, under orders to bring in the violators, and on July 8, 1910, they descended upon Newark.

One group went to a place kept by Lewis Bolton on South Third street; another to the Bismark, on West Main street; a third to the "restaurant" of Charles Henry, on the west side of the public square.

The news spread quickly. Crowds began to head for these three places. Detectives entered the Bolton place and when they attempted to serve a warrant they were assaulted by the employees. Two of the employees were placed under arrest. Bolton and a mob of hooting citizens followed the detectives and their prisoners to the county jail, a substantial building regarded as impregnable.

As the raiders entered the jail with their prisoners the crowd followed them inside and attacked detectives who had been left in charge. The detectives fired their revolvers into the air and fled out a rear door.

In the melee, Detective Edward Hale was struck over the right eye with brass knuckles. He dashed to a rear-by hotel. When the mob followed him there, he again escaped, accompanied by two colleagues, and went to the sheriff's office, where Hale's wound was dressed.

Meanwhile another squad had raided the Bismark. They locked the doors on the inside and handcuffed the bartender. Several hundred persons gathered outside and began to stone the place.

Mayor Herbert Atherton, notified of the riots in progress, sent Police Chief Robert Zergiebel to investigate. The police official approached the raiders, demanded to see their warrant, and departed, leaving two city policemen on guard outside. A few minutes later Chief Zergiebel came back with a warrant, charging the dry raiders with assault and battery on the bartender.

Then he loaded them into a patrol wagon and hauled them to the city prison.

Dry detectives had to run for their lives when they tried to serve a warrant at the Charles Henry establishment on the public square. The crowd surged into the place as they entered and ran the raiders out the back door. Employees from the glass factories, released for the noon luncheon hour, had arrived, and their sympathies were strongly against the snoopers.

The raiders ran from the Henry place through an alley into the square. The crowd followed, hurling bricks and shouting, "Kill them!" One raider made his way up West Main street, where he fell into hostile hands and was badly beaten. Police rescued him and took him to the jail.

Three of the dry agents, including Carl Etherington, 17, managed to board a westbound street car and rode to the fair grounds. Men in automobiles and afoot pursued them. Young Etherington and his co-workers left the car at the fair grounds with the intention of boarding the next interurban car to Columbus.

hounded by the mob. Etherington just failed to make it.

What happened next we cannot say—the stories conflict. Etherington said that William Howard, a former city policeman, who ran a place near the fair grounds, struck him with a blackjack. What we do know is that the boy detective drew a revolver and shot Howard through the stomach.

The crowd saw Howard collapse in the road, and then made for Etherington.

He had already started to run west along the road, but the enraged mob soon caught up with him. He was severely beaten, then dragged to Howard's place, known as "The Last Chance."

Now a city patrol wagon arrived and police officers took Etherington into custody, much against the wishes of the crowd. As the officers headed for the jail with their prisoner, the crowd followed, ed, sought to halt the wagon, and shouted, "Lynch him!" Two shots were fired at the wagon, and the driver forced the horses to a gallop.

Reaching the county jail, the policemen ran with their prisoner to safety, and the jail physician gave Etherington first aid.

It was then about 1 o'clock in the afternoon.

Excited citizens milled about the jail all afternoon, and young Etherington appeared to Sheriff William Linke to save him.

Etherington was a Kentuckian. He had run away from home three years before with the avowed intention of becoming a detective. This was his first experience. He had seen a "blind" ad in a Cleveland newspaper and answered it, saying he was 21.

The crowd at the jail talked only of the raids and the shooting of Howard. When the factory whistles blew at the end of the day, the streets surrounding the jail became black with people. At 7 p. m., there were a thousand there, at 8 there were 5,000. At 8:30 the news leaped from lip to lip—Bill Howard was dead.

The temper of the mob grew uglier. Men, women and children edged through the gates and into the yard. A colored man mounted a stone and shouted that the death of Howard should be avenged, at once. A white man climbed up on a stone post, crying, "All you who are game, come on!" Inside the jail young Etherington watched, and waited. Sheriff Linke, inexperienced in such situations, did not telephone Governor Judson Harmon at Columbus, 35 miles away. If he had, troops would have been sent, possibly in time to halt the lynching. Nor did Linke swear in extra deputies. He was confident the mob would never be able to get inside the jail.

Not until leaders of the angry assemblage made their first assault on the jail door did the sheriff go to the telephone and attempt to reach Adjutant General Charles G. Weybrecht, head of the Ohio national guard. But by now the telephone wires had been cut, and the jail was isolated.

NEEDED OKAY FROM GOVERNOR.

Finally, Linke did manage to reach an outside phone. He talked to Weybrecht at 10 p. m. Weybrecht began to mobilize 200 men, and ordered two interurban cars held in readiness. However, Governor Harmon was at his summer home in Charlevoix, Mich., and Weybrecht could not dispatch troops without an order either from the governor or the governor's secretary, George S. Long.

Sheriff Linke left a man on the phone in the effort to get in touch with Long. Then, when Long was found, he insisted that he talk to the sheriff in person.

The messenger rushed back to the jail, only to find that he could not get inside. The crowd had broken the outer gates, had swept aside the outer guards, and had started to batter at the steel door with a length of 4 by 4 timber.

When this had no effect, 50 men picked up a telegraph pole and attacked the door. Still it held. Next they procured a railroad rail. For half an hour the steel door resisted the combined attack of this battering ram, crowbars and sledge hammers. While the assault was in progress, a man mounted a post in front of the jail, a rope over his shoulder, shouting:

Not a shot was fired from the jail.

Mayor Atherton, meanwhile, had addressed the mob, pleading with it to disperse, and promising that justice would be done. But mobs, once under way, seldom listen to this sort of talk.

Suddenly the door gave way. The crowd surged into the lower corridor. Snipers began firing into the cell windows. The mob headed for the second floor, and Etherington.

Sledge hammers opened a blind steel door, and a mob leader shoved a revolver through a steel grating, demanding the keys. An attendant surrendered them. Thus the crowd won to the control wheel, which simultaneously opened all cells.

Outside, the people saw a blazing coat fall from a second floor window. On the level was a shining detective shield.

"They've got him!" a woman screamed, and at once the mob made for the public square, the word apparently having been passed that the "necktie party" would be staged there.

Not until later was it known

A LEAD AGAINST TIME.

BY ELY CULBERTSON.

World's Champion Player and Greatest Card Analyst.

I HAVE frequently stated that the opening lead involves one of the most difficult decisions that a bridge player has to make. On at least 50 per cent of all hands the opening will make a difference of a trick or more.

The choice of the right lead is particularly important when a question of time is involved—for example, when it is apparent that in order to take the maximum number of tricks a lead must be chosen which will establish something quickly. In cases like these, blind adherence to theory and conventions will not prove successful.

The following hand was played in the recent southern New England pair championship, and the south player, by selecting the right lead, won a clear-cut duplicate top for himself and his partner.

East, Dealer.

Both sides vulnerable.

The bidding:

East South West North
1♣ 1♥ 2♣ 2♥
4♦ 4♥ Pass Pass
4NT Dbl. 5♣ Pass
5♦ Dbl. Pass Pass

The bidding was a little optimistic on the part of everybody concerned with the possible exception of East. West's free bid of two clubs, while not open to much criticism, was rather weak, and North's two-heart bid was absolutely uncalled for. South, of course, was trying to push his opponents too high and did actually succeed in doing so. However, his entire success depended on his "reining lead."

East's very strong bidding clearly showed that he held at least three aces. South was positive that he could take a trick with his ace of clubs and another with his king of diamonds. The third, it might seem to many players, might be obtained very easily by opening a heart and driving out the ace. This reasoning, however, is very superficial. North's raise must have been based on length in hearts and very little else; consequently it was almost certain that either East or West held a singleton heart.

It was apparent to South that he was going to get in the lead twice, but twice only. If the heart opening proved unfavorable it might be too late to shift to another suit in which a trick could be established. Of course, the only remaining suit was spades, and two rounds might be required in order to set this suit up.

On the basis of this reasoning, South actually chose to open the three of spades. The result is apparent. Declarer won the first trick and was forced to let South in with the king of diamonds. Another spade was led, this time establishing the queen in the North hand. South was still sure to get in with the ace of clubs in order to cash the setting trick.

The above play seems very simple when described, but actually most of the other South players opened a heart. This, of course, gave the declarer plenty of time to take out both the high club and the high diamond and thereby fulfill his contract. The whole hand is a beautiful example of the importance of the time factor on the opening lead.

Close slams should usually be bid when the result depends only upon a correct guess. Even if they fall 50 per cent of the time, a player will at least break even in the long run; and if he is fairly lucky he will guess correctly more often than 50 per cent of the time. However, the opponents will frequently minimize his chances by judicious false-carding and psychological plays.

In the following hand the declarer reached a contract of six spades and a choice of plays presented itself. One play had a certain margin of superiority and this probably would have been the one chosen had the opponents not interfered.

The bidding: (Figures after bids refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

South West North East
Pass Pass 1♣ Pass
1♠ Pass 3NT(1) Pass
4NT(2) Pass 5♣(3) Pass
6♣(4) Pass Pass Pass

1—This is probably the best bid that North could make. Although he holds adequate support for spades, his distribution seems to promise a better play for a game in no-trump. Furthermore, this bid promises about five honor-tricks and is a mild slam invitation.

2—Not part of the four-five no-trump convention. South passed a fairly good hand originally and must make some further action. He cannot rebid spades and so chooses to give his partner one more chance in no-trump.

3—North now offers the choice of contracts.

4—A slight overbid, but now that the contracting has reached five-odd, South might as well gamble on six. As a matter of fact, the hand should reach six.

The opening lead was the ten of hearts, which the declarer won in the dummy with the ace. He now led the ace and another spade and finessed the ten in case East originally held four spades to the queen-knave. West's knave won the trick and another heart was returned, declarer winning in his own hand with the king. He now drew the last trump. At this point it was apparent that the contract be made if the diamonds were split 3-3, as one of declarer's small diamonds could be discarded on the good queen of hearts and the third round ruffed. This would establish the 13th diamond in the dummy for a club discard. Even if this play failed, it was possible that a squeeze might develop. Declarer, therefore, led the ten of diamonds. West played low, and the ace in dummy was put up. Then the queen of hearts was led and a diamond discarded from the closed hand. Now declarer led the king of diamonds and West dropped the queen. All that declarer had to do now was ruff the third round and his contract would be made.

However, other factors were beginning to enter into the situation. With the queen and ten having already gone, the 9-8 provided a perfect sequence. If East held the knave-small, the 8 could be led through and passed. The choice was close. Declarer led the 8-spot, and east, of course, played low. At this point the declarer went into a study which lasted about five minutes. If West held originally three diamonds it must be to the queen-knave. West had not opened them and had not even considered covering the ten. The distribution of the hand was fairly unbalanced, although this factor was not very important. At any rate, declarer finally discarded a club and the contract was set one trick.

The play, of course, was not right as the chance of the drop and squeeze seem to offer a slightly better percentage, but in the face of West's psychological barrage I do not believe that declarer can be blamed for the course of procedure he chose.

AT THE GARDEN PARTY

Wide Brims and Sheer Fabrics Are Fashion's Choice for the Outdoor Tea

GOLF frocks, tennis dresses and spectator sports models are all very lovely and becoming, but when an invitation arrives to a rather swanky garden party, or perhaps when the best beau rings up and suggests a tea date at one of the most exclusive country clubs, then you find yourself rushing sadly about at the last minute looking for something just a bit more dressy than these. You know you really wouldn't feel at ease in a sweater-skirt-and-beret ensemble.

For this type of Summer entertainment you're required to "go feminine" with a bang. Ruffles and frills are all accepted and advised. Fluffy dresses of printed chiffon or crisp frocks of organdie are the thing. And your hat—well, it must be wide-brimmed, the crown rather flat, and trimmed with either flowers or ribbon.

You'll find it a refreshing change being all dressed up. Sports clothes do get a little monotonous. However, if you're such a stickler for simplicity that you flatly refuse to wear frills and furbelows, we have another suggestion for you. There is a variety of sheer crepe frocks in solid pastel tones that are fashioned on semi-tailored lines. Some of them add just a dash of femininity with a full sleeve, or a jabot collar, but they are simple enough to suit the most fastidious sports girl, and yet are appropriate for the Summer outdoor tea party. We have sketched a few of the most charming of these for you today.

SIMPLE IN LINE

EXTREMELY effective is the flesh-colored sheer crepe frock below. Note the full, three-quarter sleeves, stitched belt, and wide Ascot tie. The wide-brimmed hat of black shiny straw is faced and banded to match the frock. The white eyelet embroidered frock, with bouffant skirt and bertha bodice, is belted with bright blue velvet ribbon. A bunch of field flowers matches the trimming on the rough blue straw hat. The stunning wide-brimmed model in black Milan, shown at the lower right, features a square crown. It is banded with gros-grain ribbon in a soft shade of rose, with conventional flowers to match

CRISP AND DAINTY

WHITE organdie with an all-over embroidery pattern in gay red dots makes the crisp frock below. Wide flared ruffles are used over each shoulder, and red and black velvet ribbons make the belt. The wide-brimmed hat of white horsehair straw is trimmed with a black velvet band. Printed chiffon is used for the short-sleeved dress at the right. The three-quarter jacket has full, puffed sleeves. There is a wide crushed girdle, and two organdie flowers finish the neckline

VIVID ACTION MARKS OVERTHROW OF MACHADO GOVERNMENT IN CUBAN REVOLUTION

THE BULLET-RIDDLED BODY OF ANTONIO JIMINEZ, dreaded leader of the "Porra," strong arm squad of former President Gerardo Machado, lying in the Havana street after being slain by the crazed mob that looted the city after the resignation of Machado.

MAN WHO KILLED JIMINEZ, A HERO TO HAVANA MOB—The Cuban revolutionist who shot and killed Antonio Jiminez, leader of the dreaded "Porra," strong arm squad of former President Machado, hoisted on the shoulders of the frenzied mob that swept Havana following the resignation and flight of Gerardo Machado. (International)

CRAZED MOB SACKS PRESIDENTIAL PALACE—Above, the frenzied Cubans destroying the furnishings of the presidential palace. Invaluable antiques were dashed from the windows of the building by the raiders. Below, the mob surging through the interior of the palace. (International)

FERRARA FLEES AS MACHADO FALLS—Orestes Ferrara, Cuban secretary of state under the Machado regime, is shown upon arrival in the United States by airplane after having fled from Havana under gunfire.

AFTER 80-MILE WIND HIT—Ruins of one of the buildings at Fort Isbel, Texas, after an 80-mile-an-hour wind took a heavy toll in property damage.

A SANDY SOUL-SAVER—Aquatically speaking, Uldine Utley is a conformist—to prove which she evangelized on Oak beach in Chicago in a none-too-generous bathing suit.

MRS. RALPH BURBANK CARMICHAEL, who was before her recent marriage Miss Dorothy Thaxton, of Milledgeville, Ga. (Eberhart)

R. E. PHILPOT, of Tampa, Fla., new assistant treasurer of the Home Loan Corporation in Washington, says friendly counsel of President Roosevelt ten years ago encouraged him in fight against their mutual handicap resulting from infantile paralysis.

ALL THIS TALK ABOUT SCANTY BATHING SUITS came to a head in Seattle recently when a policeman found this young couple heading for the waves.

"BRAIN TRUST" STARTS ITS WAR ON CRIME—Assistant Secretary of State Raymond Moley, head of President Roosevelt's "brain trust," begins the job of pitting his mental faculties against those of the racketeer and gangster. He is conferring with department of justice men.

HOW WOULD YOU LIKE TO CLIMB THE STAIRS to the attic to get the car out? That's what the occupants of this curious five-room house that is four stories high have to do! It's in Sausalito, Cal.

THE PAINTER OF THE OLD SOUTH---WILBUR G. KURTZ

ATLANTA'S FIRST POSTOFFICE was in Washington Collier's store, which stood, in the 1840s, at the northeast corner of Peachtree and Decatur streets, now Atlanta's "Five Points."

WILBUR G. KURTZ, noted artist of Atlanta, who is perpetuating on canvas the life and romance of the old south. A number of his beautiful paintings, based on long historic research and absolutely accurate in detail, are reproduced on this page.

HOWELL'S MILL—An historic point in the Atlanta campaign of 1864. It was located several hundred yards below the old Howell Mill road crossing of Peachtree creek, and was owned and operated before and after the war by Judge Clark Howell, grandfather of the present editor of The Constitution. The old bridge has been supplanted with a new one further up the creek, the road being changed, accordingly.

A GEORGIA COTTON PRESS—A reconstruction of the old press that stood on the Ellison plantation at Ellerslie, Ga. It was operated by mules and slaves.

THE ARRIVAL OF THE LOCOMOTIVE "FLORIDA" AT "TERMINUS," later called Marthasville—finally, Atlanta. This little engine was brought here from Madison, Ga., overland on a truck hauled by 16 mules. It made its first run on the Western and Atlantic railroad December 24, 1842, to Marietta.

OLD WHITE HALL TAVERN—Built in 1835 by Charner Humphries. The building stood at the northeast corner of Lee and Gordon streets. The road from this tavern to Atlanta became Whitenail street.

WEIGHING COTTON—A Georgia plantation owner of anti-bellum days weighing in his cotton.

FAMOUS LOCOMOTIVE "GENERAL" at Big Shanty, Ga., in 1862. The engine was stolen by federal raiders at this point during the Civil War. It is now on permanent exhibition in Chattanooga.

RECENT BRIDE AND ATTENDANTS—Mrs. Hugh Averille Chapman, of Ludowici, whose recent wedding was a brilliant event taking place at Savannah, on the silver wedding anniversary of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Madison Smith, of Hinesville. She was formerly Miss Lena Mae Smith.

M. A. D. G. E. Evans starred in "The Nuisance" at the Grand.

CLAIRE TREVOR in "Life in the Raw" at the Rialto.

BEAUTIFUL NEW GARDEN recently completed by Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Rutland at their home in Leesburg.

WHAT IS WRONG WITH AMERICAN MARRIAGES?

Adela Rogers St. John reveals in today's magazine, how spying and prying wreck so many Hollywood marriages. No one else knows the real behind-the-scenes Hollywood as intimately, thoroughly and intelligently as this celebrated novelist. Hollywood stars are her friends and confidants. In her penetrating and sympathetic analysis of wedded life in the movie metropolis, she tells things never before revealed.

Tarzan

by EDGAR RICE BURROUGHS

THE QUEEN'S VENGEANCE

"MY FRIEND ERICH AND I HAVE SAVED YOU FROM DEATH. WE HAVE BROUGHT YOU TO THE THRONE," SAID TARZAN. "DO YOU THEN DARE TO DESTROY MY FRIEND?"

BUT THE QUEEN MADE NO ANSWER. SHE TURNED AND FLED -- WEeping.

TARZAN SOUGHT OUT THE NEW PHARAOH TUTAMKEN FOR EXPLANATION OF HIS SISTER'S CRUELTY. "SHE IS A QUEEN AND IN LOVE," SAID TUTAMKEN. "A QUEEN PERMITS NO RIVALS."

"AND TARZAN DOES NOT PERMIT HIS FRIENDS TO BE DESTROYED!" SAID THE APE-MAN, "WHERE IS ERICH VON HARBEN?"

TUTAMKEN SUMMONED HIS SPIES, WHO WHISPERED TO HIM -- FEARFULLY.

"THERE'S NO TIME TO LOSE!" CRIED TUTAMKEN. "COME, TARZAN! THERE IS A CHANCE YOUR FRIEND STILL LIVES!"

HE HAD HIS FASTEST CAMELS MADE READY

....AND THEY RACED OVER THE DESERT.

BIRDS OF DEATH WERE CIRCLING OVER A CREVICE IN THE FOOTHILLS.

IN THE CREVICE VON HARBEN WAS CHAINED TO A ROCK, AND THE FEROCIOUS BIRDS WERE ATTACKING HIM.

...BUT JUST AS HE COLLAPSED, TARZAN'S ARROWS STRUCK!
